Listen, I think this is a bug on your software. Earlier today, when my game crashed, I kept clicking "renegade" on the renguard client to start the game back up. It'll open the renegade image, then an hourglass would come up for a few seconds then nothing. I fixed it by going into the processes and closing the game.exe (I think) anyway I done something like that and got it to work.

Now...c4prox tried to start his up when it crashed, he done it 30 times or whatever, all he seen was the hourglass and nothing.. could this trigger an 'alarm' on your system if multiple attempts are made in a short space of time being unseccuessful in opening the game?

What I think you should do is boot renegade up with renguard, get your game to crash to desktop, then try to start the game up without closing renguard, see how it won't start (maybe depending on your OS, I dunno) and do this multiple times to see if it triggers an alarm.

I ask this because I happen to know prox was playing renegade around this time and he crashed to desktop. I doubt he'd be trying to modify the program while playing.
