j_ball430errr...India and China are in ASIA. And just because they have a lot of population doesn't mean they're powerful. We're not the largest nation, yet we (US) are by FAR the most powerful nation in the world.

Who ever said that India and China are not in Asia?

Leave an isolationist hole and you'll find out that countries like Russia, India, China are quite powerful. Militarily for now, and economically as time goes on. The US is not as high up in the world as you think... yes, singly the most powerful military force, but when you have more than one of these powers mentioned at once, it's a different story...

My point is not that, however - my point is that the US "coalition" is nothing more than the US and the UK with some add-ons there so that they can say - "Oh - we have 30 nations on our side." And of course Eritrea and Azerbaijan, together with the superpowers of Ethiopia and El Salvador, are, as longbow says, "the most powerful nations."
