You have 10 graphics on your site :rolleyes: not to mention the stupid javascript fadein and fadeout effects which besides being gay show your n00biness in the web dev field.

Not to mention you have no idea of color contrast and your menus are hard to read :rolleyes:

The layout of your site is completely inconsistant, just look at your photo album, there is no consistant menu either, people have to re-type your URL to get back to the main page. :rolleyes:

Great map pack section in the downloads, but oohh where the hell is the download button for it? Nice not even a link to download it.

You don't understand what website design is about, the main objective of a site is the focus of the site, you lost your purpose, your concentrated more on the design the object, your site is a typical geocities site.

I have desgined sites too, and the objective is always the focus:

<http://130.39.58.56/cb>

<http://130.39.58.56/crawfish>

<http://130.39.58.56/capisc>

Needless to say I rather program my OWN galleries, message boards, or what ever else I need to. I don't depend on others to make my work.

All my sites have a roubust ADMIN backend, which allow you to change any aspect of it. Its a compelte selfmade Content Manager that I made on my own. But what do you know, your still stuck on pretty fiary graphics and javascript affects.

:rolleyes: pretty powerpuff does not mean a site is good or not :rolleyes: My site was meant to be a leech site and a server news site: KEYWORD: SERVFER NEWS, notice we never put anything pertaining to clan matches or anything pertaining to our clan, this is meant to be a site dedicated to the public that plays on our servers and what maps, tools they need. :rolleyes:
