

---

Subject: just an animation for you vets

Posted by JadenStriker on Thu, 22 Apr 2004 04:20:21 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

your over reacting, I was replying to rangers post.

As far as education goes, I do have a good education even if my speeling is bad. Dislexia just forces me to work a little harder to wright, thats all, so STFU aobut my grammer and spelling, you don't have a clue how much more effort I have to put in to it.

The movie and Rangers comments are the one's that talked about payment cuts, so ask them about it. I'm mostly talking about the lasy bums who would use the cuts as an excuss to not having enough money to live their lives because they do sit around doing nothing.

And I already know that people don't serve for the money, ask any one in any govermental posiion and most will tell you that you don't do govermental work for the money, all of your public school teachers a lot of time will tell you that and any govermental agent office employee, so that goes without saying, but even then there are extra binifits that some use as an excuss to go in such as the military paying off student loands and other debts. Even though a lot of people do join for the honor and the pay is decent, there are those who have other reasons based on money issues that they join for.

And putting the fact that you have served looks good on a job application, so I do have more of a clue, and already stated something about that before. You didn't quote that part about giving refrance to it, so you need to be reminded of something you ignored.

And as far as being a real job, your putting words in my mouth when you make this statement.

Quote:Correct me if I am wrong but it looks like you are saying being in the military is not a real job.

Yes you do assume to much.

---