

---

Subject: Why British Coppers are funny

Posted by IRON FART on Wed, 28 Apr 2004 22:29:33 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Quote:

If she was going just 1 or 2 MPH more she would've lost her licence and as a result, probably her job too. Luckily she got away with just getting 3 points on.

Where did this happen?

In America, no cop is required to pull anyone over for speeding or traffic violation. The only time that you will be pulled over, is if the cop thinks that you are a danger to yourself or others. Also there is a 3-MPH lee-way. Say speed limit is 70 MPH, you can't be pulled over for speeding if you are going at 72MPH, and you cannot be pulled over for driving too slow if you are at 68.

Although, whenever I see a cop car on the freeway, it's always weaving in and out through the traffic for no apparent reason. (Joyrider?)

That rap thing was wrong. Kind of funny with a good intention, but touching a sensitive matter.

I would like to hear that in welsh.

---