If she was going just 1 or 2 MPH more she would've lost her licence and as a result, probably her job too. Luckily she got away with just getting 3 points on.

Where did this happen?

England, UK (keeping it on topic with "Why British Coppers are funny").

The average would've been taken to 100 mph and over, which in this country is an instant driving license ban. Give or take a few mph, the same happens if you are going twice the legal speed limit (i.e 60 in a 30 zone).
