Be careful what you believe on the news, first off, they are civ's, they don't know much more about war then what the generals tell them. Second, they are only aloud to say what the generals to say. When you watch the news it is obvious they are not telling you every thing, so obvious because they are saying they are not telling you every thing. But to make up for it they have good reasons for not telling you every thing, they don't want to tell you what they are doing so that the Iraqi don't find out. They won't tell you what the Iraqi are doing so the Iraqi don't find out that they know what they are doing. That is how war works.

Its to late do discuss whether or not Iraq has weapons of mass destruction, the war has already started, and if we find out "Hey, we are sorry, we thought you acutely had those weapons," I don't think it will stop the war either, so as I said, it is useless to discuss either way, this war is still going to go on.

But I am not one to hinder free speech.
