

---

Subject: The protests.

Posted by Cpo64 on Fri, 21 Mar 2003 18:38:25 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Carlperhaps my statement was a little confusing on that point. what i was trying to say, is that i support the our president until the next election to a certain extent. in otherwords, i have no choice but to support him until he is out of office. What would it look like to other countries if we didn't support our preddident at all? How would that PROMOTE democracy in any way, shape, or form?

If you had the option not to promote your president? It would look like a democratic. (Not that it

I don't know what you can do, because from what I can find you do not have a responsible form of government. But in Canada you can do something about it, you could petition for a recall campaign, and if enough of the citizens agree with you, that Member of Parliament (MP) will loose there seat, a by-election would be held and you would get a new MP. If enough MP's loose their sets, the government would lose their majority in the House of Commons, and a new government would be formed.

Your government seems very different; it is so different from mine it is hard to understand. Then again I find it difficult enough how anyone could support war.

In Canada we have the problem of no support for war (not bad) and no support for our forces (BAD!) Yet many Canadian complain that our military is small and outdated, but they are not willing to spend there tax dollars on it. Although due to recent events, more funding is being aimed at our forces.

---