I'd like to make a question known that many people sometimes neglect to ask:

Why do the Terrorists do what they did?

I in no way think that what the terrorists did was right, and in no way could it go unpunished, but why would they bother committing terrorism without a reason? Perhaps if their reasons were addressed prior to the act committed, then a peaceful resolution may have come about. This is quite broad, and probably doesn't work in every situation. But ask yourself that question.

I won't go into a depth analysis of the Iraqi War unless I feel the need to, but that is my view on it. As undefined as I made it.
