The above article talks about US getting attacked across the globe.
That has nothing to do with WW3.

US has attacked a nation unilaterally, without any backing from US or its close allies. And while doing so belittles its allies arrogantly.

UN failed to do anything about it, this as a result made France, Germany, Russia and China as well as some other nations come closer as a result of US action.

Europe is divided.

Recently France, Belgium and Germany announced a closer military. They have for the first time singled out the United Kingdom.

This military pact which will include Russia and to an extent China.

Countries will RE-ARM to counter the huge US military. As of now any international body, treaty is void.

No country is safe.

Before countries were safe due to international organisations and treaties.

There was peace in Europe for 50 years after WW2 due to international organisations like UN.

WW3 will be near.

Lots of wars after this will occur if the US continues its unilateral policy.

If the people of the US stand by and let the mad man Bush and his cronies continue the world would be far less safe.

For the first time Germany in 50 years never had the nerve to stand up against US policy. It has never ever done that prior to WW2.

Germany, France and Russia see this US policy directly in conflict with their own national policy.
