Doitlel really hate those people who are out there protesting about the poor civilians. You know what!? Why dont you go protest in Iraq infront of Saddam! Oh wait, you can't cause youd have your heads cut off. Only in America can you protest like this... Think about in the past, could you protest in Communist Russia? How about China? (Think Tianemen Square), Nazi Germany maybe?

Why don't people actually face facts instead of just fighting the war for no reason. You know what the US convoys going through Iraq keep being greeted by? Iraqi civilians! Waving and celebrating! Oh think about the poor iraqi child who will be attacked by that mean ol' US... Yeah right! Alot of them are so happy to see us! Think of the poor little Iraqi kid who has to watch as Saddam's men slowly kill his parents! There's your real problem.

Interviews of Iraqi citizens have shown that for many this war is the greatest thing since sliced bread. One was even quoted as saying he'd rather have himself blown up by an American bomb then have his family wait longer to be freed from Saddam's rule.

I also found it ironic that I forget which news station it was again, but they where interviewing African Americans about the war. And the guy said, "I dunno about the white people, but among us, war is never a good thing. I don't know one of us who is for the war, and Bush needs to listen to the Minority." Hmm... War is never a good thing? So if you could you'd go back and stop the Civil War? Maybe he never heard of a little thing called... O I dont know... SLAVERY.

Well that's the end of my rant for now... If I think of something else I'll post it.

well...hello there Trent Lotte...nice to finally meet you. Just because people said war isn't a good thing...doesn't mean it's not a necessity at times. I'm sure they'd agree that the Civil War and WWII were necessary.

so your saying people are retarded for using their rights for the exact purpose they were give to them? The fact that we are able to be out there protesting is one of the biggest things seperating us from Iraq or any other of the countries you've mentioned. It's called "freedom", look into it...
