That arguement is only valid if the "med" slang usage is misleading, or detracting to the agrument at hand.

I fail to see how using abbreviation one time, has any bearing on the issue at hand, which is the survivability of a Mobile Artillery, versus a Medium tank.

If he was typing " so then i got in my med at the med facility and met this med student getting into his med sized medical med"

Then there's a problem.

How about adding useful, and supporting info to a constructive arguement rather than trolling for spelling errors?
