I used to run Cross Country, long distance. I ran a few half marathons when I was in my prime, about 2 years ago (before my knees went bad). This one time I was training for an upcoming race and for some reason this hornet started following me. I couldn't really outrun it, but with me moving pretty fast, and brushing it off when it tried to land, I managed to keep it from stinging me. It was 4 miles to my house from where I was in the forest, and that hornet followed me the whole way home. I managed to shut it out when I came inside, but damn, it was pretty scary.
