

---

Subject: When Lies Are Revealed.

Posted by NHJ BV on Mon, 24 Mar 2003 19:57:29 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Crimsonhavocsnipe, don't forget the huge human rights violations he has committed. If you've forgotten, I have made you an appointment with Saddam's Minister of Rape at 1800 hours.

Not that I don't believe you, but can I have some reliable source on that one?

CrimsonWhat you MUST remember is that the Democrats' goal is to make the President look bad. You are believing just what the Democrats want you to believe.

If there are a lot of civilian casualties, it's good for the Democrats.

If there are a lot of troops lost in combat, it's good for the Democrats. (Why do you think the helicopter crashes are getting such excessive coverage?)

You can also turn that around; in "don't believing anything the media is saying because it is all Democratic propaganda anyway".

CrimsonThe Democrats don't control (as in, have a majority of) ANY of the three branches of government right now, but since those who own the large media outlets are Democrats, they control the media and they can report the news to the world the way THEY want to. You might also notice that it's not easy to find information in the news about them firing back at us. Anything that justifies this war and makes the President look like he made the right decision has been conveniently omitted from mainstream media.

Next thing you hear will be that the only things we are hitting are orphanages full of children, churches, and nursing homes.

That last line is bullshit, and you know it. Besides, if commercial television shows more-or-less what the viewer wants to see (or else they won't make money), why aren't there more republican media?

---