You are not approaching it objectively. If you were you would say..."Saddam is dirty bad motherfucker who needs his ass kicked."

ob-jec-tive (P) Pronunciation Key (b-jktv) adj.

Uninfluenced by emotions or personal prejudices

While I'm not perfect, I'm trying to attack this war as objectively as possible.

Quote:Oh, and the ' could'. He is not going to make toasters with these parts.

Thats the beauty of the hypothetical card, friend. He could potentially make an army of toasters.

Quote:What the fuck do you think he will do with rocket engines and metal peices that were used in missiles?

What I see here are some piles of scrap metal being labelled Saddam's personal missle arsonal. For starters, there is no proof outside saying "Iraq has shipped out scrap metal, therefore this scrap is automatically Iraq's", when in reality, (while it's unlikely, but not impossible), that might not necessarily have come from Iraq.

Quote:If you took apart a minute man ICBM and threw it in the back of a truck not many people would know what it was. So a hunk of metal scraps can end up as a dangerous weapon.

Well, I could also throw a can a potassium and a can of nitrate into the back of a truck too. That doesn't mean I'm going to make gun powder.
