ok then. Just wanted to make sure it wasn't a reference to the American Constitution.

Edit: I took a second look at this and noticed something. When you state that they have the ability to seek council, that's only when the person is arrested. However, as far as I saw, there was nothing in the constitution stating anything about a lawyer needing to be present. Not saying it's not part of judicial law, it's just not mentioned in the constitution.
