If there was only one comment I could make. It would be maybe try adding a bit of... Weathering shared between the plate it sits on and each of its feet. The way they are right now I'm just not convinced it's been there very long. If the rest of it is scratched and dented up, this part looks like its brand new floating above the ground there. Maybe if you added some dirt that looks like it accumulated up against the feet and on the ground it might look just a tad better.

Maybe something like that. Just a little bit more messyness down there as I'd imagine dirt and grime would accumulate against the edges of the feet and the ground there.
