I announce my AIM screen name (AS IF IT WASN'T OBVIOUS ENOUGH) in the Mod Forum as being "Aircraftkiller," to the public, and not even 30 minutes later... Some loser decides to use AIM exploits to crash my client.

Is that all you're capable of since you can't win any arguments with me? Or are you a coward?

If you aren't, step forward and say who you are. I'd like to know why it is that you feel the need to use AIM exploits to knock me off.

Not like it wasn't that hard to set AIM to "Allow only users on my buddy list to contact me" again. This usually happens twice a year. Some assrammer goes "LOLLERSKATES LETS EXPLOIT HIM OFF AIM" and I get back on, putting back "only allow users on my buddy list."

Only if you don't know how to use it. MSN is the worst of them, "oh hey, you can't talk to them unless you have their e-mail address!"

Aircraftkiller, how about correcting yourself this time?

It's desperate and not desperate.

I'm glad to see we are all grasping the point of this thread!

Aircraftkiller"oh hey, you can't talk to them unless you have their e-mail address!"

Uhh...you have to know someone's s/n to talk with them...so it's the same deal. It seems that AIM is always a step being msn...the whole bottom right screen announcements, the "invisible mode"...all those ideas are ripped from msn.

Hey..I coined the "lollerskates" phrase here.

Well actually, I stole it from someone on another forum.

I don't like using AIM, but I do because my friends use it. Personally I prefer using MSN, but half my buddies on SN are in a different time zone :/

Anyway, to make AIM more bearable to look at, I used ResHacker with "AimRes.dll" and customized it ALOT.
