My sites are using way too much bandwidth on the current box, so I have purchased a new box to host these forums and several other sites I run. The new box is hosted by Server Matrix which allows 1000GB of data transfer each month, which far exceeds to 50 GB I am allowed with my current provider.

As a result, I will be moving these forums to the new box this evening (my time). At the same time, DNS will be updated to direct you to the new location. However, some people will have trouble with their ISP not updating the location for up to 24 hours.

I will post a workaround on the old location for those who don't move over there right away.

Sorry for the inconvenience, but I just can't continue to pay $200+ every month for the excess bandwidth.
