When a player disconnects, the host can see that they dc'd instead of just leaving, a green message which the clients don't see. What would be REALLY cool is if all players could see that message? Is that possible?

I meant for non-dedi servers without all the bots etc.

I'd definately like to see that.

Also, I know another bug. If you were kicked from a game, you can't see pages unless you go to chat, and see it for a second. This gets really annoying, including when you want to hear what that n00b host says and laugh at his words.

The only way you can make it work again is if you were to sign off WOL and sign back on.

Actually, you can just host a 1 player server for yourself, then after a few seconds you see the pages you missed

What you can also do (until this is fixed) is click to join a game, hit START and hit ESC before it comes up with "joining game". It'll say "action cancelled" and you'll see the pages sent to you in the top left. You may have to adjust brightness to see them, or (if you're using a flat screen) lean up and look at them from the top down of your monitor.

Yes... A common bug. "Yo" "Yo" "Yo".
If you want to see them you're forced to get in a new server.
