Hey, I'm currently in eighth grade in the US and I'm moving on to High School next year. Anyone have any tips or advice?

Thanks

Remember, don't act like you are the top shit your freshman year. You may have been high and mighty in the 8th grade, but you are beginning from scratch now.

Also, looks can be deceiving. Many times I have confused a senior for a freshman or sophomore, so remember to tread lightly.

Other than that, stick it out, roll with the punches, and try to survive your classes as best you can.

First thing you find out when you get there: high school sucks.

Try not to procrastinate too badly for papers and compositions you have to write, or you may find yourself staying up all night (literally) to write a satire in the style of Jonathan Swift to turn it in the day before finals after it's already two months overdue (true story).

1. My math teacher sucks. As if you get my math teacher, switch.
 2. Oh yeah, about the project thing, I have a poster due tomorrow and I haven't done much work on it, I have most of the info but I'm a horrible procrastinator (which is why I'm posting right now instead of doing it) but anywayz.....
 3. Study. I have almost never studied in my entire life..... and I have a load of C's right now.....

x2. I good good grades with no effort. But I could be in the top 10 if I put in the effort.

My problem is I don't do homework. I score extremely well on tests and that keeps my grades up. Im also very good at standardized tests. I score very high on them. So my teacher are always surprised. I know the material but I don't do the work I have to do out of class. Unless it is a huge project or something.

Don't be popular. Popularity is a disease. But also don't piss off everyone in the school- be at least on speaking terms with most people. However, I maintain that following every last socially accepted norm turns your brain into slush, so don't be too much of a conformist.

Also, don't let yourself get roped into thinking you can learn the way they try to teach you...figure out how you learn best, and do that. I guarantee you'll lose less points doing things your way than if you do things their way and do them wrong.

And no, you don't have to get straight A's. If you bust your ass 100% of the time to get perfect grades, you'll miss out on the whole back end of your childhood. When push comes to shove, happiness and a C owns the hell out of depression and an A.

I finished all of my math, science requirements before my senior year and social studies before the second semester of my senior year, so I don't have to do that much anymore.

Getting girls is very easy in high school (imo, but it just might be my school, all those crazy rich girls <3 private school). Most are just curious about sex so get them as early as possible. Girlfriend = sex. Find a girl, take her out, ram her. Or you can be a sleezeball and go to a party and get a drunk one.

Umbral_DelaFlareRemember, don't act like you are the top shit your freshman year. You may have been high and mighty in the 8th grade, but you are beginning from scratch now.

Not true! Well for the most part it is. Tread lightly like he said, but if anyone tries to pick on you (two seniors did when I was a freshman) then give it right back to them. I bonked one off a glass case (too bad it didnt break or else I wouldve had a lot of fame freshman year) and the other I just threw to the ground.....then this really really really big like 300 lb 6 foot something kid came and grabbed me, and then my brother broke it up, since I assume he was friends with him. I wouldve gotten my ass kicked by that dude more then likely, but I had my connections up top(brother!)

Anyways, dont do anything stupid. Dont get into trouble, cuz itll catch up to you know matter what you do in life, so if you want to smoke weed or get arrested for underage drinking, do it, but when a company/military runs a security background check on you for clearence, dont expect to get your job. Heck, if your dumb enough to do it, I hope you dont get your job. <--trying to instill the truth in yah bro., dont mess up.

Also, just do your work, and be respectfull. I dont know how many times ive gotten into arguments with punks who disrespected the teacher, including subs. Big crap, they may think your a suckup or w/e, but my sister is a teacher, and I know if anyone treated her like that id stick my m-16 down their throat. Remember, thats someones mother, sister, brother, father, treat them like you and your family would like to be treated.

Stand up for what you believe in, dont let teachers push you around. Ive seen it happen, and Ive seen it delt with accordingly.

Most important, think ahead. Like I did. I knew I wanted military when I was a freshman. Why? Because of law enforcement. The military opens up doors you cannot even believe, and especialy when it comes to law enforcement, with the combination of college, youll go far! Just a little idea for you.

Anyways, dont sweat it. If you keep your head on straight, your ass out of shit, and your respect in line, youll do just great.

I have done pretty much the opposite of all the stuff you guys are telling gunrun to do. I'm one of the laziest people, I have never studied, ever, I rarely turn in large projects (never did one this year), yet I'm passing all my classes. If your smart you can slack off, if you want to. Not a good choose as colleges will look at your grades, but if you want to you can still get by without doing much. I acted like I was on top ever since I got in, never did any one really like it till I beat up a kid (commonly referred to an oompa loompa at my school) on Tuesday. Its not like your first impression is gona stick in high school. I went from 110% nerd to Mr. Popular. Don't ask. If you be yourself, and people like you, you will succeed. But if people don't like you, being yourself, change or be rejected. Either works, but you probably know which one is better. Also, be like me, and get on the good side of your authorities, it will pay off. When i beat the kid up, the principle had no trouble believing that he started it, which he did, and wisent as hard on me. If your late and get sent down, and you've been a good kid, he/she might let you off easy. Also, if some one confronts you willing to fight, don't fight them, be calm, and be very rude. People will wonder how you remain calm and can act like that in face of a guy who can kill you, makes people respect you more, works for me. aka, beating people up isent always the best way to go.

At my high school the seniors try to sell you pool passes to the pool on the third floor.....Although there is no pool and there is no third floor except the roof. Umm, girls i had one for four years but couldn't seem to keep another for over a month since then....Why, nobody kno's. Keep your grades up and act yourself. At my schoo, there are over 2000 people and if you split that in half thats about 1000 GIRLS So it shouldn't be to hard. Leonardtown High School Football Rules! Good Luck. Although im in 8th too and approaching that step to high school next year. i cant wait i hate my current school. 10 years in the same school SUCKS!!!

I have an idea on how you had a gf for 4 years and havn't held one for a good period of time since. This is the EXACT same thing as my brother and this in fact happened to him last year (he's a 9th grader). He went out with this girl for like 4 years, but of course, it wasn't ACTUALLY going out, but rather than a title and somewhat talking on the phone. That ended and my brother was able to get more girlfriends, but they just didn't seem to work out.

I have then developed a theory that could possibly be wrong, but it helps me to feel smart Anyways, it goes like this: When you're in like 3rd or 4th grade you're too young to realize and act out REAL relationships. As you grow older, you start to gain knowledge and your relationship ends because it was never anything to begin with. And at that stage, you're old enough to get an idea of a true relationship, but you're still too immature to have a true relationship still, and the relationships never go anywhere because of that. But this all changes in a year or so.

The real secret to high school is just to pack big heat. Once even seniors see you pull out some Uzis, it's all over. Just don't keep the automatic actuator or ammo in them and I believe they are legal. Depends on the school.

But wouldn't walking around with an Uzi clipped to your belt be pretty tight? [Even if it won't fire]

...[which is more than likely a good thing.]

Phoenixx, not just not loaded, but lacking the trigger actuator assembly. As in it has no trigger and nothing inside to make it tick. The school would probably ask you to remove it, but I doubt you would get in trouble with the law unless they called the police in panic without understanding the situation or you refuse to remove it.

...not that I'm recommending anyone actually doing this, of course... :rolleyes:

advice for getting girls:

don't spend your life on the computer making mods for computer games work out often. Get a schedule and a program. Follow it.

Find out what color you are (spring? fall? winter? summer) and dress according to those colors on the color wheel. You'll look a lot better.
Stay clean. shower. Wash your hair.
be yourself.
don't be a puss- if you like a girl, go up and talk to them. Don't be afraid to flirt.

that's it man. keep those in mind and you will be fine.

High school is all bullshit anyways. once you get into university you realize how stupid it all was. Just be yourself, don't be a smartass, be friendly and open, and you'll do fine.

okay, i read the rest of the posts:

Having passed thru high school and garnered knoweledge and wisdom therefrom:

You're all idiots. (j/k)

But seriously. High school is not a big deal. The only advice i can give you is don't let yourself get pushed around. Don't let anyone put you through hazing. If someone gives you a hard time or pushes you around, then give it back to them. 99% of bullies will piss off once they realize you have no problem breaking their nose. If you don't feel like you're strong enough/capable enough to do this, then get in kick boxing, or a martial art. (i'm a 2nd degree black belt in ITF taeKwonDo, working on third). You'll get fit, confident, and people won't mess with you.

You'll do fine. Join some sports, clubs, music. Get involved, make friends (btw choir is a great way to get to know chicks! Im NOT friggin' kidding.)
don't worry about girls and shit, that stuff will come in time. Let it happen.

Copy out everything you and everyone said here, and save it on your comp. When you graduate in grade 12, look back on this stuff and realize how RIDICULOUS most of the advice here was you'll see that it wasn;t a big deal at all.
good luck man!

I'm rather fond of San'gria, myself...not too harsh, very tasty.

Although there is something to be said for my sister's Amaretto sours. Good stuff.

Always in moderation, of course, never while driving. Drunk isn't fun, especially after it's over...or so I'm told; I've made a point of NOT getting drunk, and never intend to either.

But you must make a point of not bringing it to school. There's enough bombed/stoned/floored morons waddling about during school hours- some dip thought it appropriate to bring a gatorade bottle full of moonshine into my school at one point, and the whole damn room smelled like booze breath.

I have to agree with MrBOB; if you find a girl you like then go out with her but don't go out with someone just so you can brag about having a girlfriend, in the long run you will regret it.

All the rules over marijuana are so silly sometimes. No one's ever OD'd on marijuana. Perhaps in a combination, but never just by itself. It's not like heroin or crack, and to my knowledge isn't even addictive. While people may get in to habits, they don't get addicted to it. This whole business of sending kids to prison for indulging in their curiosity once is so stupid. Drug dealers and smugglers are the ones who should bear the burden, not some kids who feel the effects of peer pressure or want to try something new and be experimental. Besides the regulations, I think marijuana may actually be safer than alcohol for people just trying to have a good time.

SuperFlyingEngi I think marijuana may actually be safer than alcohol for people just trying to have a good time.

Think about what you just said. NEITHER IS SAFE! Do you realize how many people die due to drugs/drinking? Do you? I do, personally. And let me fucking tell you, its not fun. So before you make a stupid ass comment about a "GOOD TIME" think a little. Think about what your saying, and think about the emotional effects it can have on people. Because Ill tell you what, finding out that your neighbor, and someone you grew up with all your life is dead is not fun. Not fun one fucking bit. You know whats worse? Having to see their family in shambles. Having to see your friend in a casket, when it doesnt even look like them. So fuck you, and fuck your good times.

Neither are safe, but they both aren't deadly if used in extreme moderation. Be careful and make sure you are of age before you drink.

Dear DBB:

- 1) I never said either one was safe, just that marijuana can be safer than alcohol.
 - 2) Yes, a lot of people die due to drugs, but how many people die due to marijuana? If used carefully it truly is not a very dangerous drug compared to things such as heroin, crack and cocaine. However, it does impare your judgement and should not be taken while operating cars.
 - 3) Why do you think a lot of teens use drugs? Perhaps its so they can have a good time. I have never used illegal substances nor do I plan to in the near future.
 - 4) If someone close to you died from illegal substances, I'm sorry, but f*ck me not.

4) If someone close to you died from illegal substances, I'm sorry, but f*ck me not. Yes I overreacted, but I guess thats natural.

1-You did sympathized with it, therefor I came to the conclusion you were a user and felt you were safe and not in harms way.

2-I dont know the statistics, marijuana can be good for some people. But, think of what it does to you, think of how many people 'hot box cars' then go driving. Enough said.

3-Good on not using the illegal substances, Im proud of you for that. And im in the same boat with you as that. Teens are dumb, teens cause death, teens do it for show.

4-You are correct, fuck you not. I overreacted, but your post made it seem like you were a sympathizer. Sorry if I offended you, but it just touched close to home.

1. Marijuana and alcohol are both drugs and both have adverse effetcs.
2. Drinking in moderation is not as bad as smoking marijuana, and if you think otherwise, you're lying through that hole in your trachea. You are inhaling soot and ash.
3. neither is good for you, so you should steer clear until you are near or at legal age.
4. Marijuana doesn't make losers or cause you to fuck up your life. Only people who are already losers or already have a fucked up life will be shafted by it's use. Just the same, getting stoned all the time can cause you to mess up your priorities, so steer clear of pot.

Gunrun, just be yourself when talking to girls. It will all come together in time. You're still young, and you've got a lot to learn. Just be open, friendly, and yourself. Don't try to be anything else. If a girl is into you, then it'll come together. In the meantime, as to how to get girls, try joining sports/choir/school activites. You'll be surprised as to how many new friends you can make (and how many people you may have known for some time will become your friend). Don't be afraid to approach girls and talk to them or make small talk. That's the biggest mistake you can make.

Be yourself and don't be afraid! I have full confidence that you will do fine man.

Sir PhoenixxFreshmen year is by far the hardest out of all 4, Senior year is by far the easiest...

I finished all of my math, science requirements before my senior year and social studies before the second semester of my senior year, so I don't have to do that much anymore.

(btw, I graduate high school in 13 days!)

Damn you, all I needed was 1 credit and attend 1 semester and I could have graduated early....but I decided to take some AP coarses.

Oh yeah for the tips. Dont piss off your bus driver, sit down and shut up in class, work like hell so you can slack off later, get on the good side of every teacher (even the ones you dont like), and.....well.....find a pratical girlfriend that understands grades, and money (By far the hardest part)

I realize this topic is old but um...make sure you're not uglier than Austin Powers and don't be SHY. That's pretty much all there is to it, also, don't let them get emotional or anything, or don't let them know you care too much about them, you might end up getting played.

EDIT: BTW, don't just rush yourself and ask out the first girl you meet. What you wanna do is meet a LOT of girls and just mess around with the ones that like to get horny with no strings attached. If you wanna try to have a SERIOUS girlfriend be ready to forgive a lot and admit you're wrong EVEN WHEN YOU'RE NOT, something I can't do, nor expect a lot of people to be able to either

EDIT #2: If you want a talk sometime add me on MSN at x15incherx@hotmail.com I like guiding people down the right path

I started junior year two weeks ago, and it is by far the hardest year of school I have ever taken. EVER.

Anyway, don't concern yourself over your image, or what strangers in there think of you. Friends are gained by them knowing and liking your personality, not the image you convey.

Shyness is frowned upon in high school, but don't worry about it too much. I've found out that just by keeping your mouth shut and listening to people introduce themselves to others, you can find out more about them, and then, when they decide to talk to you, they don't have to go through the process of introducing themselves.

And the most important thing of all: RELAX. This isn't the ultimate test to see if you will succeed or fail in life, so just roll with the punches and try to play the cards of Fate the best you can. Just be yourself.

3. Study. I have almost never studied in my entire life..... and I have a load of C's right now.....

My advice, is to be outrageous. Do things that others might not. If you think a Hawaiian shirt over snowpants is cool, than by golly wear it. If you think of something funny, say it, and if you get the opportunity to turn your teachers desk around, and put their chair back up to it, by golly do it! (only for cool teachers though). I try to do whatever I can think of and it's all that keeps me going. If you go through high school as the generic Carbon Unit humanoid you'll prolly want to kill yourself. Don't wear only one color or not eat certain foods to be different. The point isn't being different, it's doing whatever you feel like. In short, be crazy, but as a stipulation, be legally, sanely, crazy. Don't put yourself in any harm or such, but if your gonna get to class early, and stack all the desks into a giant pyramid. (Works best in a western civilization class) By golly do it! I did and it was pretty fun, lol.

Be yourself, blurt out random stuff in class (people will laugh examples: "Socket Wrench" Just saying this will make people laugh there asses off, "I work at mcdonalds" This one is a classic" Don't be a shy little bitch, no one will like you or care to get to know you, be loud, Dib;t vue a Fk what anyone says to you, if a senior says "HEY FK FACE" give it to them right back. Heres somethin i do and people ALWAYS smile or laugh. Just walk up to a random person in the hall and even your freinds and be like "YOU LOOSE" or "WHATS UP LOSER"

Holy Shit guys, It's been four fucking years already. I'm currently a senior right now and working on my college applications.

My sophomore year I got a girlfriend. We went out for four months.

My academics have been ok. Haven't failed any classes but didn't get straight A's either.

I got involved heavily in the music programs participating in the marching band and choirs, and also did 3 musicals.

Some Tips for guys in high school right now, get in your college recommendations early, struggling to get my applications done has been pure hell. Also, when ever you get to pick people for lab groups in AP Physics, choose wisely.

To end this epic bump, I would like to hear your tips for college.

I don't mean to be negative but I've got to agree with sadukar, none of those people are around anymore.

x2. I good good grades with no effort. But I could be in the top 10 if I put in the effort.

My problem is I don't do homework. I score extremely well on tests and that keeps my grades up. Im also very good at standardized tests. I score very high on them. So my teacher are always surprised. I know the material but I don't do the work I have to do out of class. Unless it is a huge project or something.

I know he's not here anymore, but this is exactly what I do.

I used to think High School was hard, until spending time in college. High School is nothing. I wish

I could go back to those days and only worry about 1-5 page essays that were easily graded....

Other note: Play sports, work out. Those alone will secure you in High School. Me and my best friend were the strongest people in school. Football was amazing, so was wrestling. Don't pass up those opportunities to play sports, you'll never forget it.

Too bad this topic was created 3 years ago, I'm in the same boat now that he was then.

When he posted this, I was just out of high school. I am one of the few people that when they say, "I won't miss high school," they are telling the truth. Most people do end up missing it, but not me. I'm glad to be out of high school. I like being reliant on myself, though I rarely take it upon myself to do well in courses.

The biggest differences between HS and College/University is the atmosphere with so many other people, the teachers don't care about you. You're paying them, and that's all they care about, and the other thing is that you're responsible for yourself. As I said, teachers aren't going to hover over you. You'll have nobody to blame but yourself.
