Ten years old kids were using those at schools in Montréal, when their parents heard that, they were obviously shocked.

Quote: The VAST MAJORITY of people who wear jelly bracelets do not consider them "sex bracelets". The idea that middle schoolers are wearing jelly bracelets and having sex is, as far as we can tell, a media myth. Sex bracelets are something used and enjoyed by adults.

Uh huh, yup..... :rolleyes:

AprimeDo you actually believe this? :rolleyes:

It wouldn't surprise me if it were true.....

Besides, even if it is false, people will think it's true and do it, causing it be be true. If it fooled me it'll probably fool a middle schooler, maybe.

You know, when 10 years old kids wear them and know every single detail about them, there's obviously something wrong.

Over half of the middle schoolers (seventh-eighth grade) at my school wear these, thought it's slightly dialed down a bit.(Most naive and prude private school in existence.) Here they're known as "kiss-me" bracelets, and are fashioned from the plastic seals found on the inside of most 20 oz. soda bottle tops.

Whee, I'm a freshman now, the world of middle school is gone forever. Damn.

Meh...I don't support this sort of thing, you shouldn't need a bracelet to show you're ready to have sex.

Yes, 10 year olds wearing these is a bad thing.
