websiteNickelback, you lazy, talentless bunch of wankers. What, did you think nobody would notice that you're recycling your hideous dirge and selling it all over again to your deluded fan base? You bastards, you're taking advantage of those tone deaf MTV brainwashed twats who are too thick to notice you're releasing songs that are EXACTLY THE SAME as ones you recorded earlier. And here's the proof, people. Listen to their first godawful hit, played through the left speaker. At the same time, an equally shite single (released two years later) will be played through the right speaker. Can you spot the difference?

Don't worry, it's NOT one of those things that suddenly shouts HEY EVERYONE IM WATCHING PORN OVER HERE!.

Lousy untalented hacks. They were SO lazy that they just copied the entire goddamn melody? Bleh... I could understand using the same rhythm changes, maybe, but the actual melody, again? What a bunch of losers.

I can't remember which country, but there was a video of Nickelback opening for a black/death metal band...Chad goes "So you wanna listen to some rock and roll or go home?" The audience was completely silent. After a while, some people started throwing stones at them and they left the stage after giving the crowd a finger. Idiots.

Guys, I just downloaded a proper quality version of this song (Someday) from kazaa, and that site is full of shit. The song doesn't even include the other song in it; try both speakers. I was already thinking the song could pass off fine with just the right speaker, and it turns out true. Download a real version and see, it's actually a pretty good rock song if you're a fan of Nickelback.

Umm, they're two different songs, one (someday) is played on one speaker and the other (whatever the title is) is played on the other speaker. It's how they match tunes, even though they start out differently.

And they're music is super-easy, coming from a guitarist's perspective. Even just be listening to it.

Never mind, I thought the site was trying to pass them both off as 1 song. LOL.. :oops:

They don't sound THAT similar if you just listen to the second track with a better quality. I don't think its stupid to release a different track with a layout that worked for them 2 years ago. I mean if it was successful, worked and people liked it, why not use it? I quite like the song actually, but I liked the original too

The songs aren't the same thing, I'll give them that much. However, they used the exact same notes for the rhythm verse/chorus, maybe with a chord every now and then instead of a power chord. The notes are used in the same order too, but they start out differently. To me, it just seems like they don't try to make a new sound, just write more of a blatantly overused theme of lyric. But they gotta make money I guess.

However, just because two songs are in the same key and have the same structure does not make them the same song.

I'm the same way. I rarely listen to the radio anymore though. I listen only to hear country music and news/talk.

But anyway, maybe this explains why all that stuff soudns the same, maybe it's a trend among the genre.

Dishman: Simple songs aren't always bad, though. Lenny Kravitz is pretty good and he makes rather making "simple" songs on the guitar.

Takes alot to get your head round the double bass ut yes i can manage it, if i had any money I would buy two base drums and have a setup similar to Billy Cobham's (two base drums and around 7 sabian cymbal + hand crafted hand painted 7 peice drums). That would probably make my life easier.

and btw i play rock/metal (I LOVE the beat to For Whom the bell tolls by Metallica, simple as hell but its just fun). My fav drum beat HAS GOT TO BE Pick withers' from Dire Straits' "Sultains of swing".

if you have never heard of Dire straits, they are not heavy or metal they are calming slightly country style music but they're music is EXTREMELY talented. Mark Knopfler has to be one of the best guitarists out there, along with Eric Clapton, Jimi hendrix, and the rest.

I would seriously recommend:

Telegraph Road
Sultains of Swing
Lady Writer
Walk Of Life
Local Hero
Your Latest Trick
Down to the Waterline
Money For Nothing
Brothers in Arms
Among many others that I love.

Yeah I know the Dire straits. and yeah, they are good. But uhm, I'm not a drummer though, I'm a bass guitar player. But the Drummer in my band has a "double kicker". Instead of double bass. But, Is there any sound difference between a Double kicker and "real" double bass?

Also, Do you know the band megadeth? It's hardrock/metal. They also have a damn good drummer. One of their guitar players played guitar in metallica. He left metallica for some reason, I don't know why. It was Dave Mustaine. Anyway, check 'em out. some good songs:

Megadeth- train of consequences
Megadeth- Hanger 18
Megadeth- Peace sells
Megadeth- A tout le monde
Megadeth- Skin 'o my teeth

I don't know if you like death metal, If so, Check out morbid angel. Their drummer can drum so incredible fast. They have a song called "drum check". it's drums only, it's a drum solo. you can try to find it on kazaa.
