...that the porn industry is more important than our children are.

That fucking ACLU defending the right for everyone regardless of sexual orientation, religion, color and now I guess AGE. The Supreme Court ruled that a bill that put tight restrictions on the porn industry's web accessibility violated their 1st Amendment rights.

Yeah, I saw this.

And yet, we can't display the Ten Commandments in public, or say the pledge of allegiance because it's "OFFENSIVE".

That's it. I'm moving to Canada.

Remember, the Supreme Court is not supreme over the other two branches. They are all equal.

Anyway, I don't feel like talking about the whole thing right now. It reminds me too much of my addiction. (I'm a recovering porn addict)

Good idea. We still have our government paid healthcare thanks to the election yesterday. People here sleep on the streets... literally.

But the Supreme Court is the only branch with the power to overturn laws or bills with out the worry of veto's. If they determine a law/bill or whatever is unconstitutional it is final. Only the Supreme Court and overturn a Supreme Court ruling. They may not be able to write the laws, but they sure can delete them or at the very least make you rewrite it.

Two words: Replace Kennedy

Government did jack crap with solving my problem, though. God is the one who helped me.

I think you will find that a constitutional amendment cannot be overturned by the Supreme Court, because the best the supreme court can do is declare something unconstitutional and an amendment is by definition constitutional.

Additionally I don't know but I would guess that a constitutional amendment could be used to overturn a Supreme Court ruling, however I believe that it would not be retroactive, hence the change would only effect new crimes committed after the amendment.

Finally the Supreme Court justices are nominated and approved by the other branches of government; hence they are indirectly voted in by the people and so (theoretically) represent the people.

Just out of interest lets assume that this law was upheld and was enforced ruthlessly.

Wouldn't that just mean that all the porn sites would move offshore like most of the spammers and casino sites?

I doubt that either the enforcement or the non-enforcement of this law would have any significant effect on the internet anyway.
