Well, I don't think too many people will argue against terrorists being bad. Although "Killed hundreds over the years in Israel" and "Killed hundreds of U.S. Soldiers in Iraq" are dumb to mention. U.S. Soldiers were casualties of war and of course they would attack us if we are attacking them. Palestinian terrorists, while still doing horrible acts, at least have a reasonable cause that they are fighting for. I would be pissed too if a huge group of people took over where you used to live just because it says so in some book you don't even believe in.

So native american should start bombing places in the United States then?
To the homicide bombers it's not about the land, it's about the Koran, if you don't accept their Koran, you must die.

These fanatics around the world trying to shove their Koran down countries throats will eventually lead to one of said countries shoving a nuclear fission device down their throat. Mecca during the Ramadan might be a good target to an angry country.

The people killing U.S. troops are people importing themselves from surrounding countries. We didn't attack them in those surrounding countries then run back to Iraq with them chasing.

Pick a side, piss someone off, stop getting crotch burns straddling the fence to please and justify all sides. I'm siding with the U.S. military and the people of Israel, if they win, they won't kill me.

There is never any justification for bombing civilian targets. If the Palestinians were truly committed to peace, they would not send bombers into crowded buses, restaurants, nightclubs, and other targets picked solely for the number of defenseless civilians. They might have some claim on credibility if they focused their attention on military targets. Instead, they attack people that cannot fight back with the intention of causing terror in the population. I don't know what definition you use, but that makes them terrorists, and they have murdered thousands of innocent people over the years.

Quote:To the homicide bombers it's not about the land, it's about the Koran, if you don't accept their Koran, you must die.

The leaders of the terrorists sure don't believe that. Islam is a religion that preaches peace, not "bomb the infidels." They exploit their religion to control their followers.

Quote:These fanatics around the world trying to shove their Koran down countries throats will eventually lead to one of said countries shoving a nuclear fission device down their throat. Mecca during the Ramadan might be a good target to an angry country.

That would be both a great tragedy and a colossal mistake. Attacking holy sites is no way to defeat a terrorist movement- that would make whatever country dropped the bomb worse than the terrorists they claim to be fighting. The religion is not evil, the people who exploit it for their own ends are, and killing thousands of innocent people in their place of worship would only serve to swell the terrorists' ranks and fuel their anger.

All I was saying is that the Palestinian bombers have a cause. Take the 9/11 hijackers: we didn't attack them, we didn't take over their land, they said "Fuck it. They're infidels: We'll attack 'em." The Palestinian bombers are people who are retaliating against people who took their land. I'm not saying what the Palestinian bombers are doing is good, but they have a valid reason to be mad. I see no reason for a Jewish state to be in existance the way it is.

(And Native Americans did hold up some resistance, ya know. They just lost. Native Americans are more peaceful and wouldn't do crazy shit liking strapping a bomb to themselves.)

And I seriously don't see how you can say what people are doing to American troops in Iraq is suprising. Yes, Americans are dieing on account of terrorists in Iraq. But 12,000 (?) Iraqi civilians have been killed by us, and we INVADED THEIR COUNTRY. Of course people are going to retaliate.

Oh, and about your "shoving the Koran down our throats" stuff. I have a muslim friend at school who says that these terrorists have no right to call themselves muslims. They do not represent what the teachings of Islam are about. Ignorant people like you think that all muslims are killers, so you figure we can just bomb Mecca, even though the vast majority of people there aren't in the same mindset as fanatical terrorists.

Do you honestly think Americans are responsible for 100% of the Civilian casualties in Iraq?

We have done less 50%. Other than that it has been terrorist attacks that have killed civilians.

You are trying to make it sound like we are evil crusaders bent on destroying all of Iraq. And the only thing the insurgents are doing is defending their country.

What you fail to mention is they have killed as much if not more civilians than we have. At least ours are not intentional.

That you are pulling numbers out of your ass?

Quote:There is never any justification for bombing civilian targets.

It ended WWII pretty quick.

Quote:Attacking holy sites is no way to defeat a terrorist movement

That's why some families have flags instead of their sons instead of flattening the Imam Ali Shrine in Najaf which became a handy bunker for the terrorists.

Quote:All I was saying is that the Palestinian bombers have a cause.

That's it, encourage them.

Quote:The leaders of the terrorists sure don't believe that. Islam is a religion that preaches peace, not "bomb the infidels." They exploit their religion to control their followers.

The religion of peace at work in Russia:

Quote:Oh, and about your "shoving the Koran down our throats" stuff. I have a muslim friend at school who says that these terrorists have no right to call themselves muslims. They do not represent what the teachings of Islam are about. Ignorant people like you think that all muslims are killers, so you figure we can just bomb Mecca, even though the vast majority of people there aren't in the same mindset as fanatical terrorists.

Oh I know they aren't all killers, but after a while of terrorisim and the peaceful muslims never in mass telling the terrorists to stop it or denounce them, some will grow to hate them all.

Yes, I more or less did pull 12,000/6,000 out of my ass, which I demonstrated by writing "(?)" after the number "12,000". Thank you for noting the obvious. :rolleyes: The important thing is that it is a rather large number.

Quote:That's it, encourage them.
How the fuck is saying that they are fighting for a cause encouraging them?

You parade around with these pictures of awful killings saying "The religion of peace at work..." and then go ahead saying that you admit they are not all killers. So why post a picture of work done by people that represent a very small fraction of all muslims, and say it is the work of Islam? You can't have it both ways.

And Nodbugger, everytime I read a post of yours I feel my IQ has dropped a point or two. I hate having to baby you through my points because your ignorance just can't seem to absoarb it all: We invaded Iraq. Of course there will be resistance as people need to defend themselves and retaliate.

Riftgarde, if someone punched you in the face, and you punched them back, and everyone now hated you because you retaliated, would you see that as fair? If you start trouble, you ought to expect trouble in return...plain and simple. To call American casualties in Iraq due to retaliations an act of terrorism is silly. After all, it is us who went to Iraq. No one invited us.

Quote:Oh I know they aren't all killers, but after a while of terrorisim and the peaceful muslims never in mass telling the terrorists to stop it or denounce them, some will grow to hate them all.

Wow. So people grow to hate all muslims because they do not publicly denounce acts of terrorism that they weren't even involved in? These "people" sound a lot like asshats to me... :rolleyes:

That all depends on who Saddam would have decided to imprison and torture next or what village of people he decided to have rounded up and killed all at once and buried in yet another mass grave (it'd be a lot faster than having to imprison and torture them one by one, anyway).

You seem to be more worried about the few thousand that died accidentally by American hands than you do about the hundreds of thousands deliberately killed by Saddam and his minions.

We all think that people on the other side of the fence are stupid and brainwashed. Okay, fine. I for one will stop saying so because it's simply getting old.

With that said, this argument originally started because Riftgarde was listing several things that terrotists or "Islamo-facists" have done. The "Killed hundreds of U.S. Soldiers in Iraq" stood out to me, and felt out of place. Why? Because we invaded their country. Of course we are going to sustain casualties. You have to be able to expect that. People are GOING to retaliate because they don't like our presence, and those people can't see that we are supposedly doing all of this to help Iraq. To list their killings in with other acts of terrorism is almost to call what they are doing terroism (in my eyes at least). Thus, I don't think it belongs there, because I don't think it is terrorism.

As for the "Killed hundreds over the years in Israel", it really boils down to whether or not you believe Jews have a right to have their own country (regardless of whether or not people are already living there). So I don't wish to discuss that further.

Sounds a lot like the underlying reasons of the US going to war.

Because of recent events and the media, "terrorist" has become synonymous with someone who is from the middle-east. But make no mistake: no one is exempt from terrorism.
