First of all, I don't have any screen shots because I am in Linux . . . So if anyone knows how to take screen shots in Linux, Just tell me because I still have the conversation up . . . And how the hell do I copy, I don't feel like typing this conversation out . . . So right now this topic that was going to be very funny has nothing in it!

ccr1567: and they r made BY THE CREATORS OF THE GAME
Spreegem: They mean pretty much the same thing

He WAS a friend of mine until this little incident, I may unblock him in a couple months, or after I get my drivers license. . . Yeah, I guess I am a newb to Linux, I haven't been using it long and I can only do enough command line stuff to make new MySQL databases, and start a few things for my webserver (for when power goes out) I am running SUSE 9.1 Professional, I love it, but the print screen key didn't work, I also shut down my computer overnight so I can't screen shot it now Linux runs so much faster than Windows, I pretty much always use it.

WOOHOO, 1 week again. ehm ok.

I actually want to install Mandrake 10, but I am afraid, my pc will start making trouble. It was hard actually getting Red Hat installed. I my Linux box, basicly for FTP and SSH. I'm to lazy to make a real website, but apache is installed. I might install an email server on it.
