Ahem. Please point out how our gun laws are shitty. Also, Detroit was ranked #3 on the U.S.'s highest crime rate and has since gone down after the CCW was legalized. I am not saying the CCW is what brought it down but voilent crime has dropped. I think it is ranked like #10 or 12 now.

There is too much controversy over this. The gun law in Canada clearly helps, the death rate per year by guns in the USA is nearly 100 times higher, But population wise its more like 7-10x higher. There is very little difference from Canadians and Americans. Both countries have idiots in them except the usa has more due to their higher population

It's so sad how so many idiots on these forums are against America. Including seeing some retard in a different thread saying that calling someone an American is an "insult". What the fuck are you guys smoking? You're against us even though we haven't done anything to you, and you're looking down upon us like as if we were a bundle of shit bags who didn't even deserve to be a country. Also, hearing Aprime say it wouldn't be bad to "share" money with America really resembles some more faggotry. America is a great country, and so is Canada. I don't see any reason why they both should be trashed just because of their mistakes or their stupid laws.

ACTUAL LAWS IN THE US:

In California, it's illigal to hunt whales from your car.

In Colorodo, it's illigal to mutilate a rock in a state park.

In Alamosa, CO, it's illigal to throw missiles at cars.

I agree with you. We fought for our Independence and damn well like it. Many Americans are bigots, that's true, but the rest of the world are idiots for believing that being called an "American" is an insult. As far as I'm concerned, most of the hatred is just jealousy. You wouldn't have a problem with us if you actually tried to be good allies. (This, of course, is directed toward those AGAINST America. I'm not trying to say that every non-American is anti-America.)

icedog90Also, hearing Aprime say it wouldn't be bad to "share" money with America really resembles some more faggotry.

This I don't agree with. There would be nothing wrong with sharing the same money system. Instead of a product being $2.99 USD and $3.99 CAN, why can't it be adjusted to $2.99 period? I suggest we'd keep it American because of the higher level of difficulty it would be for Americans to shift for a few reasons (not because I'm American). 1. More population in America, meaning more people would have to adjust. 2. Americans are stubborn and are not easily moved to change. 3. Larger circulation of US currency throughout the world.

I wouldn't really have a problem with that. What I really meant to say was that I didn't like how Aprime is now acting positive because he thought about sharing the money, since America's money system is better. That sort of represents jealousy, or maybe I'm wrong and was just over reacting.

That's not a ridiculous law. "Missile," as defined by dictionary.com: "An object or weapon that is fired, thrown, dropped, or otherwise projected at a target; a projectile." In other words, that is a law that says it is illegal to throw objects at cars. "Missile" does not necessarily apply only to rocket propelled weaponry.
