Yeah, I just threw it together in under half an hour, but for my first time, I think it deserves the feedback... however painful it may be D:

Honostly, I dont like it. You can do better with the banner, the top and bottom just end which looks odd, and I hate the whole 3Dish sides. Also the BG in the html doc clashs with the layout. I know you have more skill than this, well at least think so because of your sig. :sly:

Yes I agree with everyone else the template could be better, but meh it's your first so I dont blame you.

My suggestion (and the way I like to make navigation tables), in the navigation table add something like "valign="top" to the td tag where the text is located, to make the text go to the top instead of the centre of the table.

The pictures in there (BG pictures etc.) look like shit to be honest. BUT you made it in <30 mins and its your first.

The layout itself it not bad. The layout is the hardest part for me.

When you are making images, remember that Bevel=bad on its own.

There are tons of tutorials on how to make nice images. If I were you, I'd keep that design and work with it a little bit.

Learn some CSS. Its not a difficult thing. It will help you add a style to your pages. Not hard at all.

Stay away from gray!

Actually he did use css, execpt Glyde used in-body styles instead of an external or internal stylesheet.
<body leftmargin="0" topmargin="0" style="color: rgb(0, 0, 0); background-color: rgb(102, 102, 102);"

Yeah, I like it. It's one of DarkDemin's simple layouts that look nice. I can't really design all that well. I can do banners and sigs, but other than that, I'm not so good. I did, however, manage to create a professional looking site for my dad's company: http://www.apocmedia.com/mbauto

Affirmitive, but I'm still trying to figure out how to get all the images to stretch/repeat when the content goes past the borders made. Looks like Iframes are going to be my new friend

Do what Apoc Media did with the intergrated forums and stick a limit on the width and height of pictures so things don' get streched.

yes that is an image file, but I have coded fully with HTML in DreamWeaver. I didnt want to really show it cuz I havent done all that great of a job with it. Its just for people around the UNrules part of renegade who want basic siggy help. I told them about Apocmedia, but they dont go there (I dont know why). so me and this other kid set up this page to help some of em. Just got it put up Sunday, but the forums have been up a bit longer. and before you go, please, please, please do NOT compare me with ApocMedia. I realize they are better and I learn alot of my stuff from them. So please keep the "poser" accusations to a minimum:

and there is still some stuff that is wrong with the coding and some things are out of place.

So you see it does in fact "work", so quit pokin fun at about how i posted an image file instead of my website.
