I would have loved to see the Jaguars win, but, Tom Brady and the Pats is fine with me.

Granted, McNabb and Westbrook are good players, but they aren't exactly bright. Although, it was nice of McNabb to throw those 3 interceptions.

Well, me being from St. Louis and barely beating Tennessee for our recent Super Bowl, I know how it feels and it is nice. I wish congrats to the Pat's as they have proven to be winners.

Now the Eagles, that was not the same McNabb that Beat Atlanta and Minn. That is the problem with McNabb; he is only consistent with his Soup, not his game. Would have been nice to see the McNabb that got them there, may have been a different result. But I also think the Eagles got out coached. Why would you throw the ball 1st and goal when you have a Westbrook that showed all year his ability to make plays?

Lastly, was there like grease on the football? I haven't seen more lam duck throws since Warner tried to come back in St. Louis. "giggle"

Thanks for pointing out my typo Ball. I fixed it. (I had Pat's on my mind but meant to type the right team)

Man tough crowd gotta be perfect on this forum. Pfft.

And Ball, if I see you make an error, I will be kind enough to pm you.

Actually, after every set of plays by a team, they changed balls. So every new team possession there was a new ball. Slick new ball may i add.

=[DT=gbull=[L]=]WooHoo! Tom Brady! Hall of Fame in da bag! Too bad my mighty lions will never get to the superbowl.....

Not so fast my friend...the lions are on their way...with their offensive firepower in place for the next couple of years and a solid core of a defense including one of the best D-lines in football and not to mention Dre' Bly leading the secondary...they are up and comers for sure.

Although Westbrook is an explosive player, he is not that great of a running back (literally). He generally gets around 50 and 50, not exactly a 100 yard back.

McNaab choked on some new england clam chowder...chunky yea, its so frustrating, because the lions have all the makings of a GREAT team, but they cant put it together. and AirCraftKiller, your ignorance about the game of football is not a surprise believe it or not. People that watch football dont watch it to see sweaty men running into each other. They watch it because of the love of the game and the love of their team. My loyalty in my Football teams is what makes me like it so much, and the fact that i kicked ass at it in high-school i suppose. Best Guard in the State for my Size in 2003, Grandville(Michigan) w00t! o and btw, I bleed Maize and Blue.
