I dont know how well known this is, but Microsoft is recalling alot of their power cords. My brother just sent me the link, and i had no idea.

<http://replacements.webprogram.com/>

They will ship you one completely free.

Quote:Microsoft is providing new power cords at no charge to replace the cords that originally came with some Xbox consoles. You will need your Serial Number and Manufacture date to verify if your Xbox Console requires a replacement cord. This is located on the bottom of your console. If you have your Manufacture date and Serial Number and are ready to continue, please choose Place An Order below.

They said that mine is fine.

What's the issue here? Are the older power cords defective?

EDIT: Found out somewhere on their website, nevermind.

I aint trying to be mean or anything but please tell me you guys that have 3 consoles atleast play sports...

I noticed its getting sad now. My friend has all three consoles. he has a big screen TV in his room on all of um. Its sad because he gets up early and plays on his consoles. Then when he gets home he goes and plays on his consoles. I stopped going over to his house because I would come over and he would expect me to watch him play his single player game for 3 hours. Its not getting better either. He just bought a HD for his XBox so he can save games. he said he can save up to 70... He owes me 10 bucks and we use to go out for lunch once a week. He stopped going out for lunch because hes saving money so he can rent and burn games on his HD. He wont pay me back because hes also still saving his money for more games...

Its sad. He goes throught a game every 3-7 days.

Please dont tell me theres a ton of these people out there.

I have an XBox console and I found out mine needs replacement. I sent in an order and I'm waiting for the package. I probably would have been fine without it because I only use it for the odd 16 player lan party but getting mail(not bills) is fun

Generally people who buy consoles hate sports in the first place, i do. I go through a game in the afternoon i buy it, so at least he isnt as far off as me.

As for the HD, Xbox comes with one. But it can be upgraded.

I played Varsity Football and Varsity Track. I weigh 200 lbs and could bench 250 a total of 4 times, 225 10 times, and 185 25 times. I ran the 40yd dash in 4.6 seconds and Started at Right Guard. I was also a Varsity Thrower on the Track team with a Shotput PR at 39 feet, nine inches. I also played intramural Basketball and used to play baseball.

yep, Ive played a few sports.

Also had a G.P.A. of 3.4 if anyone cares, and I dont think they do but i like to brag.

And yes gen, your friend has problems.

You wouldn't be an interior linemant if you could run a 4'6.

bet me? i was the second fastest lineman in the state, we based our ENTIRE team off of speed and the only reason why i was the second fastest, is because our other guard ran a 4.5 second 40. You obviously didnt play for a D-1 school, fast lineman are not uncommon in the OK Red-Metro league. O, and they needed me that fast because I pulled every-other play.

That happened to my friend's Xbox. He was playing halo, left it on and forgot about it for a couple of hours, when he got back it smelled like something was burning, and it went out. He disassembled it, and found the power supply had gone out on it.

Yet another reason why Everything > XBox.

I tried a friend's XBox out...it was so horrible that I went and played on my NES for a few hours afterward to cleanse myself.

I accidently left mine on overnight in a cupboard with no ventalation. I was tired of trying to get my wireless network working so I accidentaly just walked away. When I found it it smelt like something was burning so I let the thing cool off.

I have one of the faulty power cords but luckily the thing still works.

Buying an Xbox was probally one of the biggest purchasing mistakes I have ever made. I really only bought it for Halo 2. It was fun for about a three weeks. I have five games for it, and only have beaten Halo. I have not touched the thing since mid-January and I really have no plan to. I kinda want to sell it on ebay, but there are too many for sale already.
