From today's Daily Telegraph

Nepal king cuts nation's phones to bar dissent

Nepal's King Gyanendra celebrated his country's 55th Democracy Day with full pomp and splendour yesterday, after cutting off the nation's telephones and banning public transport to prevent embarrassing demonstrations.

Just because there is dissent there does not mean its the HIGHEST form of patriotism, nice try though, and I fail to see where your archive link is to prove Jefferson said that. Come back when you have something more useful.

k thx.

omg, you are trying to justify that Jefferson "quote" by showing an instance of what would happen if dissent were not possible. Why else would you call it "OWNED"?

Sorry, I'm nearly as confused as you are. Explain yourself.

Gbull, hes not talking about the Jefferson thing.

Although I'd have to agree that dissent in this case is very patriotic. The king would most likely be viewed as a shameless asshole trying to protect himself and his position. He's this is not going to help Nepal in anyway, it will only set them back.

Therefore dissent against this sort of dictatorship would benefit the country.

You go off on the most completely irrelevant tangent I've ever seen, and then you wonder why only one person "gets" you?

i pointed out the relevancy, I thought you put this for the reason connecting to the Thomas Jefferson quote, but its obvious to me now that this is just a worthless topic that I couldnt care less about. If you do however, keep posting, im done with this thread.
