Ok several years ago on FOX (or i think it was FOX) They had this alien documentary type thing (This really wasnt like a movie, it was all done on a home video camcorder.) about this familys house being invaded by aliens.

Some scenes i remember:

The son goes outside and looks up at the house, just to see an alien leg pull itself in the window. (Later the dad goes up with a shotgun to investigate)

The entire family has nose bleeds at the same time.

The son talks into the camera in the bathroom, then it goes off for a couple of hour with no explained reason.

The end of the movie, the son walks into his bedroom, only to have the door shut behind him, revealing an alien that slowly walks tword him.

Again, this really wasnt like a movie, it was all done on a home video camcorder. If you at least know the name of the show, please tell me!

If that's the show that Oblivion watched, would it have a director? From Oblivion's post it sounded like this was all done on the spot...

I've seen something like this too, about 2 years ago. It was also about a family seeing weird things and also recorded with a camcorder. At the end they were all in the living room and there were 2 or 3 aliens that held their hand over the heads of some of the family members, causing them to go into some sort of trance. Then at the end, one of the aliens held his hand up towards the camera and it turned off

I finally watched this about a week ago. This movie... Is just odd. I don't know wether to believe it or not. Somethings seemed suprisinly real while others were just flat out dumb. Like how the aliens freeze the person recording the camera in-time or something...

I also did not know what was up with that little girl but she seemed like she was acting.
