What on earth was the name of that game for windows 95 where you were the mouse and you had to maneuver it through the maze and find the cheese without hitting any holes or running into the cat. I need to know it is driving me and several others absolutely insane!

Edit: It just came to me!

Rodent's Revenge...

Well anyone else who that was bothering can sleep soundly now.

That game came as standard with all packard bell PC's that came with Windows 95

I should know, we bought a Pentium 1 75MHz with 8MB SIMM RAM from PC world in 1995 for £1000 I think at the time.

That game was one of the most addictive games I have ever played (apart from Renegade)

Damm, I remember that game.

If I booted up my old 95 machine under my computer work table I would find it there, lol. I think I might just have to do that for old times sake.

I call that Packard Bell a Space Ship because of it's stepped design of a case and because it is so ghey to work on.
