Pretty much a ton or all of the people here in the forums hate my site and say it's crappy. I thought it was nice and still do. But, since thats the case heres what im going to do about it.

- Create a nice clean organized template from scratch
- no loadbars
- stick with one color scheme
- and hope people will like it.

it will be the same website name. I expect to finish all this before the end of my spring break.

If anyone has any idea's and not rude remarks, please let me know.

deadfive-

Hey man I don't "hate" your website & I apologize for LOL'n at your first post. It's just that you started out "check out the awesome website" etc &

I was really expecting something more. It was somewhat of a letdown & I knew the critical replies were forthcoming.

For a novice designer & new website, I suppose it's not too bad. But you must realize this forum is probably the WORST place to come "show off" your new work. For the most part, this is a very talented but critical group who will not withhold any negative comments. Brush off the criticism & take their advice - you will ultimately make a website worthy of their discriminating taste. You just have a good ways to go Hang in dude!

If you want it so people can still select the text:
readonly="true"

If you don't want them to even select the text:
onFocus="this.blur()"

thx, but how do i change the textareas bgcolor?

Subject: People hate my webpage so heres the deal

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

style="background-color: #000000"

That's if you want your textareas to have separate colors, if you want them to all have the same, do one of the two:

Put this is your <head> tags:

<style> textarea {
background-color: #000000;
}
</style>

or put the same thing in your css file without the <style> tags.
