If the last post was made a while ago; such as someone posting today, when the last post was made a couple of weeks ago, the new post is considered "bumping" the topic. (This is generally considered to be bad forum protocol)

Or, if a number of topics are posted in all at once, and a particular topic goes on to the second page, someone will "bump" it so that is on the first page again. (This is generally considered to be acceptable if it is for a good reason) people moan and groan if you bump and old topic.. but then they also moan and groan if you make a new one when you could have bumped an old one

People whine, moan, groan over stupid things.

Here, stupidity must be common.

Also you can't get a thread without someone getting bashed.

We should have a "bash here" thread and keep peace everywhere else

What the fuck? Are you saying you just discovered the interweb? Well, for you information, deadfive, that's all that happens here. Everyone has an opinion, and the only way to get that across is to shout down and belittle every one else. Who gives a flying fuck about the facts or intelligent conversation!

Forums are the only places where 12 years olds and camwhores can feel important, say important sounding things, and generally bitch about life and why you feel like such a twat (,and say lol alot). Nothing can get your message across better then a photo shopped picture of a fat guy with you message printed on his fat bulbous fucking ass. You should try making one of these l33t pictures.

Don't bother trying to add something to the thread or god forbid be helpful, instead always attack the other person (your net enemy), never defend (this is the interweb you know,) and wave your E-cock around and have E-pissing contests with every one else.

One liner posts are the best way of getting your self heard. Try to claim the moral high ground, talking Logic (vulcan style), and calling the other side a child, or calling them a fool if you can. If you can't win with these raise your post count by bringing other peoples spelling and grammar error in to question.

Because the more posts you have the more important you are.   :rolleyes:

Did any of that make sense?
