nopic tried to bypass RenGuard by putting in a modified game2.exe that CyberPunk released. I'm not buying his cover story, since I have the proof I need.

And I don't unban known cheaters, that try to bypass RenGuard.

What people dont realise is hat if an exploit is released, it will always be incredibly easy to patch to fix. The only way you can really cheat with RenGuard on is to make a cheat that RG will miss completely because of its design - and that isn't about to happen soon.

Anyone attempting to bypass RenGuard using a known blacklisted exe will be banned from the entire network to ensure that the network is cheatfree.

Cheating = fine. Since RenGuard will kick you anyway.
Bypassing = not. Anyone caught attempting to do this will be banned.

WNxCABALBut, I think they aren't legally allowed to do so.
Why not?

BHS have to pay for Renguard servers etc. They've provided Renguard to the renegade-playing public free of charge, on the understanding that people don't try to bypass it.

Trying to bypass it is certainly banworthy... and if you're banned from something, making a donation to it is a goodwill gesture.

It's not like people would pay to be unbanned, they would make a donation which would be rewarded.

$10 donation to be unbanned for this kind of thing; just like joining the SomethingAwful forums! I think it's a great idea, because anybody who is caught cheating and wants a second chance is forced to indirectly pay to improve RenGuard.

BHS is not forcing ANY server owners to use RenGuard, nor are they forcing any gamers to use it...

Well, when you consider the fact pricks like Cyberpunk say that sort of thing anyway, I wouldn't worry.

He also says Renguard's only purpose is to steal players' serials. (This comes from someone who was only just forced by his webhost to remove a serial generator from his website)

He also says it's unfair that he was banned from Renguard again, after all, he didn't do anything wrong except spend weeks and weeks trying to bypass it, spend every waking minute making and using cheats, and publicly explaining how to disconnect players and servers from WOL.

If you really want to be unbanned from Renguard, do you think admitting you cheat is a step in the right direction?

Saying you don't cheat all the time is even worse in my opinion, it means you probably try to hide it, instead of the cheaters who just get 90000 points from killing tanks.

And you realise, of course, even if Crimson takes pity on your soul and unbans you, most server owners here will probably just ban you from their own servers, since we have your IP anyway.

Lemme check if I get it right: he cheats, so we ban. Now he's gonna cheat even more cause he's banned! However, on the server I play he'll just get forceRG'ed or kick-banned and bye-bye!

Now he asks us to unban him so he can play normal games on my server (with rg) and cheat on other servers. I DON T WANT NO CHEATERS ON MY SERVER! Not even if they aren't cheating at that moment...

If u unban people that tried to bypass, they'll just try again.

If your average cheater had his way, virtually every server owner and every fair player would be banned from WOL.
