I Think if every one on the forum and all the other people you can find spam ea support repeatedly it will be such a nuisance that theyll fix it to stop the spamming.

...Or more likely they will block the emails of those who spam them?

They have no obligation to fix anything unfortunately. If they do, it is money, time and manpower wasted for a 3 year old game that isn't going to pay off for EA at all seeing as the game is being sold for less than $4.00 now.

We are not legally entitled to have updates and all that anymore. It is simply not going to happen unfortunately.

If we send them that many emails from different addresses it will slow down there support and they wont be able to block them all. Do you have any idea how much money it will cost them to keep up with us, how long it will take to block all our emails. theres 100's thousands of people. We could boycott them when they release red alert 3 no one buy it you have any idea how much that ll cost them get all your friends to boy cott them. How much of an inconvenience that is hmmm theyll get so sick of it theyll fix it.

We have the power not EA gert off your fat asses and do something about it if we pull together they will fix WOL.

Ask them for access to the the server we can maintain it.

They can easily have their systems automatically filter out emails with keyword related to Renegade. I don't think you understand how small scale this would be. There are 4500+ users on this forum. About 3000 have any posts at all. God knows how many of them are active and would have seen this.

I have a friend who opened both WOL and GSA to count how many players are in game... There were 120 on GSA and about 600 on WOL. That was at one time. So lets say there are about quadruple that many people playing Renegade regularly, that would be 2800 people. If all those people spammed EA, (and that is being optimistic) do you think they would still care?

EA has thousands and thousands of people playing other games. Renegade is a very small minority. I'm sure EA recieve emails from people in the Renegade community regularly anyway. Why is it that for 3 years they haven't done shit to improve the game? Why would they start now?

Spam them all you like, but you'd just be wasting your time.

And by the way, people from the community have asked for access to the server many many times over, but EA didn't give it. They have said it was because they don't have access to it or that it is against their policy, blah blah.

I think someone should ban you from the n00bstories IRC, then you should come and whine and moan.

Then you should kill yourself probably.
