So how many vets do we have here, by vets I mean old school people from betas and the beginning of retail? Man I loved those days, the beta kicked ass.

What do most of you all play now? Still Ren or other games and just chatting it up here?

I played Renegade since the MP demo. It was the first game I saw that really seamlessly blended vehicluar combat and infantry combat. As you've probably figured, I got the game about 2 days after it came out. I played it a ton untill 2004 when other games started to pull me in. Now I mostly play Call of Duty, but I make time for a few games of Renegade a week.

There are over 8000 unique players (by serial hash) who use RenGuard in a given week. If you want to be generous and say that half of all Renegade players are on RG, then that makes about 16,000 players. If you want to be less optimistic and say only 10% of Renegade players are RG users, then there are about 80,000 people still playing Renegade.

You all just LOOOOVE to estimate when I have actual hard figures.

In the last 24 hours, there have been 3679 unique serials.
48 hours: 4673
72 hours: 5310
1 week: 7448
Since April 14, 2005 (little over a month): 13156 unique users

It's NOT 12,000 in all of Renegade. Note that these are JUST RenGuard users, so based on my figures that only about 50% of Renegade players use RenGuard, that would mean there are at least 26,000 players left.

How many of them are using warez or bought another copy to get past server bans? How many are the same person?

Unique serial hashes don't really mean too much. It's probably more like 90% of players now have to use RG or they can't play anymore, and end up leaving.

You are talking about the exception and not the rule. Do you honestly believe that there's a significant amount of people who have to use dozens of different serial hashes within a 40-odd day span? I would put the number of serials that artificially inflate the number of users at less than 0.1%. In fact, since each serial can be connected to WOL twice, I would say the number of users is actually a little higher. I know here at my house, we have two serials for four computers and three players.

It's very difficult to argue with the actual numbers, I'm honestly surprised you're still trying.

Crimson<-- Beta phase one, you know me

I'm 25 and I still play games.

Same here, and I have 2 jobs...

I didn't know Ren came out in Feb 2002. I built this pc that November and got the game shortly after. I guess that makes me somewhat of an experienced player. EA didn't appear to support it for long though...

Renardin6l love Renegade. As long as there are 20 people and one server up, I will play it. I have more fun with Renegade than CS, HL2 or any other game.

The 12000 players are what we call a fan base. Look at tiberian sun, there are still people making mods for it and playing, a lot of people.

And it's game from 1997...

EA didn't appear to support it for long though...Westwood merged with (was purchased by?) EA shortly after Renegade was released, to the best of my knowledge. EA then promptly all but completely dropped support of every Westwood game.

I tried but it says that the e-mail address is already in use or that I have already registered with that game serial.

Aircraftkillertooncy12,000... Lets put that in perspective. A small town has about 12,000 people in it. 12,000 is by no means a small number. Renegade has the population of a small town playing it.

Steampowered.com:

Average unique users per month: 2,335,749

current min max

n Player Count 139,840 60,439 180,156

n Server Count 87,405 46,189 87,934

This is at 1:12 AM. That count blows Renegade away.

So? Renegade still has a large fanbase. It is by no means as large as CS, but you cannot deny that 12,000 players is not a significant number.

Been around since Mplayer (before GSA) and Red Alert to RA2 then on to Yuris and finally Renegade with 56k.

Our clan has been together since 1997

Hold up. If theres (as said) 26,000 players still playing Renegade, then why, if I go on now, will I only see around 3 servers with players on. Bare in mind that these servers won't even be full. I can go on WOL at any time and not see 26,000 players. At any point. Let alone 13,000..

It's 26,000 players during a month. It's highly unlikely that all 26,000 players will be signed on at the same time.
