Just take a look at this stuff my friend showed me at college. First read the picture file for what it's about, then watch the video and see if you can spot the ghostly mist it talks about.

I don't know about you but that is something definitely extraordinary...stories like this, especially w/evidence, are fascinating. Lemme know what you think.

I've seen these kinda topics before, a normal image then a big ugly thing pops up and scares the crap outta ya.

I wish this stuff was aired, though we'd probably be seeing on the front page of newspapers: "many die of heart attack in one night due to fright from car ad" or "german beer company shut down in protest over dangerous advertisement"

they aren't always done in flash. someone of them could just be GIF images with a really long delay time on the first frame before moving to the scaring thing. Plus, this one was a real advertisement but I don't know whether or not it was aired (and if it was, it would only have been in germany).

I fell for two of them before, however one was on a website, and it was an animated gif, timed in co-ordination with a nice sound to match the ugly cunt that appears on your screen.

The one with the Car in it caught me out after being told to look for a "Ghostly Mist." Dunno if its the same one though
