My families oldest cat just died. We got her when my sister was 7, she is now 26. The cat was beaten to death by my neighbors dog, I would take pictures but the dog is still loose.

hold on a sec.

you would take pictures of who, the cat or dog? I don't think I'd want to see pictures of a dead cat, and the dog is just a dog, it was only following its instincts. we shouldn't just take pictures of animals that kill and have some sort of quote along the lines of "there's the beast that did it!" wouldn't be proper my friend. I've done a good piece of study on dogs for a website, and I can tell you one thing, dogs are part of a family of breed called the Canidae family and that includes foxes and coyotes. Those animals are no exception to eating whatever they can get their mits on, yet when a fox or coyote commits the crime of eating livestock it's taken as a mere pest. Dogs are domesticated but not all dogs, even domestic ones, are far short of the same instincts that come with that of a fox or coyote. As such, we shouldn't be surprised when a dog does something like this.

Jesus! 26 years old is WAY past a cat's lifespan. Was he moving around with a mini wheelchair? My cat died 1st year at the age of 19 and he was seriously hampered with bad agility. No way he could have held his own outside either.

I was going to take pictures of the cat, and yes the cat was 19. She was very healthy, no known problems with her.

If the dog was dangerous in anyway to other domesticated animals, shouldn't it be kept in a fence? I think so.

Sorry about all your other losses, and thanks for the support.

Sorry to hear that, man...we (my family) have always been cat people, we have two of them now. I remember how I felt when our first two died...I don't think I stopped crying for a week after either one (one was 19, the other lived until 21), I was pretty young at the time.

If there are other animals roaming the neighborhood, it's best to keep the cats inside...our neighbors have learned that the hard way several times. :/

How could the neighbours dog get your cat.

A cat normally is way more agile, flexible and even faster on a territory where it could hide or climb up (under).

So I guess it was on free field? Or just just didn't notice it was getting old and just wasn't able to escape anymore...

19 years! The Methusalem in the "Cat Crew".

Guess it is in a better place now, where it catches mice all day long...

Sorry. I don't speak retardese. Can you get someone to translate into meaningful English before you post, please? Your post is an orgy of stultifying cacophonous verbal depravity; an exercise in literary impotence, and an offense to all of good taste and decency.

The Anti-Moron™ software on my PC went crazy when I started to read your post. You wouldn't know a clue if it walked up to you, bit you on the ass, and announced 'I AM A CLUE'. Oh well, at least you only charge what your free advice is worth. I am reminded of something relevant that Benjamin Disraeli said: "He was distinguished for ignorance - for he had only one idea and that was wrong."

When god was handing out personalities, you must have been holding the door. You're so boring, even a boomerang wouldn't come back to you. I'd get more pleasure from running my nostrils down a cactus, than reading another contribution from you. Any friend of yours is a lousy judge of character. Seriously, I've come across decomposing dog carcasses that are less offensive to the senses than you are. Maybe you wouldn't come across as such a dumbass if you weren't living proof that stupid people should not breed; if you weren't so fat that the Brooklyn Bridge would collapse if you ever tried to go Bungee Jumping off of it, or if your face wasn't the strongest form of natural contraception available. Nah, of course you would.

In closing, why don't you put your glasses on backwards and walk into yourself?

You really dont hear that anymore...

Anyway, yeah, sorry man. I havent been responding to this thread, because i couldnt think of anything to say. Ive lost, lemme think, about two Cats now. One had to be put down because of her cough, and the other one ran away from some unknown reason. I was about seven when one of them ran away, and didnt notice much. I was probably nine when my other one was put to sleep, and didnt notice that much either. Ive got three Cats left, and if any of them die, especially the oldest, i dont think i would leave my room for a week. I really am sorry, man. If it makes you feel any better, ive lost a Hamster, those two Cats, three Birds, and, i think, four Dogs.

Dunno how it would make you feel better, but sometimes other peoples misery cheers people up.

Ok, but i'll ask anyway. How do you know this. Dinosaurs and other organisms were around waaaaaay before man, including the chimp. Are we to assume that God only cared for man to give man a heaven, and no heaven for animals or any living organism. Technically, we are as valuable as the first, extremely small organisms that had no intelligence whatsoever. And what about before them. Did God just hover over the planet awaiting evolution of the first men and women? That breaks all kinds of rules, including the one that says adam and eve were the first man and woman to live. And when to decide to bring jesus in to teach people a lesson. Certainly not in the dinosaur age, he'd be ripped to shreds.....the dinos wouldn't care one bit for his teachings.....and apart from this. What makes planet earth so valuable he only cares for living things on the one planet. don't answer, I know that nobody can.

Here's the thing... I'm a Creationist. God created everything before man on days 1-5 (the actual length of these days can be argued from our normal 24 hours to 10s of thousands of years), and created man on day 6. Now, when he created man on the 6th day, he didn't just speak man into existance like he did for the rest of his creation. He created man out of his own likeness from the dust of the earth and breathed life into man. God gave man a choice whether or not to follow hom. WE make the conscious decision. That's what separates man from the rest of creation.
