For all you ATI Radeon 9200SE users here is a heads up for ya. I recently got the Battlefield 2 demo which should have worked fine on my pc. Except for the fact that EA doesnt tell you that BF2 does not work right with that GFX card even though its in the supported gfx cards list. Another reason to hate EA: Battlefield 2, supposedly being able to run on the Radeon 9200SE, crashed my pc everytime I started the game up on every driver I tried with the game. Finally the game decided to corrupt my graphics drivers as trigger my VPU recover which decided to crash my computer again. I now have to run on integrated graphics thanks to EA's shit fuck game.

I don't know if this was a problem on just my computer but my friend had the same problem as me with the Radeon 9200SE. Just a heads up for you 9200SE users to think about when getting this game/demo.

On a side note:

The offial list is as following

Battlefield 2 only supports the following video cards:

- Radeon X700 (PCIe)
- Radeon X600 (PCIe)
- GeForce 6600 (PCIe)
- GeForce PCX 5900 (PCIe)
- GeForce 5800 Series (AGP)
- ATI Radeon X800 XT Platinum Edition
- ATI Radeon X800 PRO
- ATI Radeon 9800 Series
- ATI Radeon 9600 Series
- ATI Radeon 9550 (RV350LX)
- ATI Radeon 9500 / 9700 Series

ATI Radeon 8500 Series
ATI Radeon X300 Series
NVidia GeForce 6800 Ultra
NVidia GeForce 6800 GT
NVidia GeForce 6800
NVidia GeForce FX 5950 Series
NVidia GeForce FX 5900 Series
NVidia GeForce FX 5700
Series

My 6600 GT isn't there but it works great...but that's a new card.

Also just browsing I found this <http://www.eaplay.com/southafrica/community/messageboards/game/battlefield2/thread/11021/?pg=last>

The one guy mentions changing it to 4X which may help you. Google is your friend on this one.

NVidia GeForce 6800 GT
NVidia GeForce 6800
NVidia GeForce FX 5950 Series
NVidia GeForce FX 5900 Series
NVidia GeForce FX 5700
Series

Thanks for pulling that list up. So all I can say now is 9200SE users DO NOT get BF2. But seriously, EA, sucks. Also on that link you gave me, its too bad mines not AGP, its PCI. :/

Your card doesn't have the right shaders, I don't see how you having a card with old technology is their fault..

It has nothing to do with shaders. It hasa to do with the graphics accelerator.

Let me give you a rundown on how I'm seeing this.

You Installed Battlefield 2 without checking supported GFX Cards.
The game doesn't support your GFX Card and corrupts your drivers.
You blame EA for your fault.

End. This should be locked.

I haven't seen an engine as bad as the one in BF2 since Extreme Paint Brawl. On a machine that can tear through HL2 with the settings maxed, I have to scale down detail on BF2 and I still have to put up with subpar performance.

So? That basicly means it's average. They optimized the shit out of Source, not every company does the same.

Besides, in a 32 player game of BF2, all settings on low, I get a higher FPS there than I do in a 32 player game of CS:S with all settings on low. I could never dream of playing CS:S with 52 players on my machine, yet it runs smooth in BF2 with that many.

Yea EA does suck, seeing a old Ti 4200 is just as fast as alot of card's in that anyway. Also talking about stable game engine's. I've heard many problems on other forums on running bf2 even with a high comp. You will need great cooling and a uber good card. And a good set of drivers or it will just crash from time to time. Renegade isn't much far from that but just pointing out Renegade isn't the only buggy engine. I still think the engine UT uses, and HI2/d00m 3 are best. You can even run that typ of games on SLOW pc's with slow card's or just uber fucking great gfx like bf2 but ofcourse you need a good comp then. Renegade isn't that bad in a way either seeing that I was able to run Renegade with 8mb onboard memmory and Intel i815 chip for 9 hours long till it would actually reboot. (fps 5-25)

Cigarettes do absolutely no good. That doesn't stop people from lighting up. They are addicted to the nicotine.

EA sucks horribly. But, EA is one of several major (and even a number of minor) companies that feed the addiction to computers and computer games.
