You all wanted Aircraftkiller to leave so badly... now he has a girlfriend and understandbly is here less. Now you complain the forums are dying. Hate to say I told you so.

Either way, these forums have gone through a dip in activity dozens of times and it won't stay this way forever.

Why stop at nickels? Get them to give you $100s, then you could go buy yourself a Space Shuttle.

You used to flame people constantly, but now you have a distraction. Congrats, by the way.

nothing.

These forums aren't alive because there is nothing to talk about. Better not to spam than to start more pointless flame wars.

Space shuttles are antiquated. Why, I even recently read that NASA is scrounging around on e-Bay for old (really) old machines that use 8086 processors, so they have a stockpile in case one ever fails on their shuttles.

8086 processors are... old.

Like, they're probably more expensive than a common newer processor because they're not made anymore.

My opinion on this subject is basically I have heard it all before. My plan, like many others, was actually to leave these forums as soon as the CnC Generals Forums became online. To move to that forums.

These forums will be going on for a while.
