To start off I am not posting this as a "recruitment post" to get people to register on my new forums. Nor am I trying to get people to go to my forums instead of these.

I have always been pretty good at fixing computer problems. And so have alot of my friends. I have created some new forums specifically for helping people with their computer problems/technicalities. Com-Tech, (Computer Techs), was created so people can post about computer problems they may have, or that a friend may have. The object me and my friends are trying to accomplish is to open up a new community and give the opportunity to help others. You can visit Com-Tech at <http://www.comtech.greatboard.com>.

Again, I am not trying to get people to register or anything of the sort. Just trying to open a new community with new opportunites and help others.
