If you could travel through time/space anytime you wanted what would you do? Assuming that there wouldnt be an existence destroying paradox or some kind of side effect from long term exposure to being out of the present.

How would he fit in me? and where?

I wish i had my Vickers Light Tank Model from Ren1918. Also i always pondered the idea of going back to the twin towers on that morning and trying to convice them to get the hell out. The intercom system would be best, however, how do you get the receptionist to let you get on it without 15 security gaurds jumping you. I always try to come up with the best way and story so they dont mix you into the terrorist group.

I wouldn't kill Hitler simply because I probably wouldn't have been alive if World War 2 wouldn't have happened. My great uncle and my grandma would be alive, and possibly even my mom, but I'm doubting my dad would have been alive because my grandpa served in Italy, married an Italian chick, was forced to get a divorce, and then come back overseas to marry my grandma. During that time, he probably would have met someone else other than my grandma, and that equals me not being here. (Yes, I do spend good amounts of time thinking about how much just ONE life effects the world. I mean, think about it... just remove ONE person from history 300 years ago, and you've just changed the world drastically. What if he was the father of someone who spawned 10 children who spawned an average of 3 each, and so on and so forth.)

I would, however, go back and live in the last century of the Roman empire just before the Dark Ages. Rome was so technologically advanced. I mean, they literally had running water in their homes, and I don't mean leaks. It's just awesome to try and fathom what our technology would be like if we never lost those 1000 years of technology thanks to the Dark Ages.

I'd use it to travel back and forth instantly from my location, to my fiancee's. It's a bitch booking airfare and spending 16 hours or more in a plane or terminal, just because I want to visit. It makes weekend visits virtually impossible. This would solve everything =D Because I could spend any spare hours at all there, and with the way I skip class, that's roughly 75% of the day. I could sleep there too and just zap back if there was a class I really wanted to take.

I would re-do the end of my senior year of high school over. I would act differently in the job I had at the time and kept it instead of getting fired, then I would have been able to go to college. I'm not sure how that would have affected where I am now, so I probably wouldn't actually do it. In order to keep Blazer in my life and whatnot, I probably just would have gone back to when I bought my minivan and decided to keep my old car instead. It would be almost paid off by now, a year later.

The concept of going backward in time was hypothesized by the proposal of traveling faster than the speed of light. However, due to the laws of particle physics, when an atom accelerates past the speed of light, its mass energy increases to that of the size of the universe. One atom can take up the entire Universe. With that said, it has also been discovered that the Universe at one point was much smaller than today, so small in fact that it was smaller than the size of a single atom.

Wow, I love Physics, glad I took it at A level.

Also this makes me think about traveling further through time. Would it mean that you have to go in some way, slower than time itself?

There in itself lies a paradox.....

If you killed him, yes you would save millions of lives in the long run. But how many existences would you destroy?

For example, without World War II I wouldn't exist today, my nana was Austrian, my grandfather was English, they met when the allies won and occupied Austria, he could speak 8 languages and was digging a trench when they first met, she thought he was a prisoner of war....but she emigrated to England.

So my dad and my auntie are out of the picture. My aunties 2 children, my brother and I, my baby girl...Now take just that selection of people that no longer exist and multiply it by how many generations they could create....that's what messing with time does.

I would use a time machine to go back into the Prehistoric parts of the world, and see what color dinosaurs really were...because no one knows!

I'd use it to investigate and document the history of the Earth, (how long it was around, how it got started, etc.), certain events, and certain conspiracy theory events, like the JFK assassination, the moon landing (which I believe happened, and all of the "evidence" that conspiracy theorists use to try to disprove it, actually prove it), etc. to know what really happened.

No one knows that though, we have hundreds of species on our planet that we dont even know about. We have creatures that lived here and we dont know what color they were. We cant even give a 100% truth to the idea that we came from apes. 200 years ago we KNEW the world was flat. But yeah.....we know that the entire cosmos was smaller than an atom. we KNOW that one for sure.

Isn't it that you can't travel at the speed of light, but you can travel faster than the speed of light? At c your mass becomes infinite, and you would need an infinite amount of energy to move. But this is not true when you exceed the speed of light.

Someone correct me if I'm wrong, it's been well over a year since I've been in physics...

Yes, Pearl Harbor was the reason the USA entered the war.....

There is a conspiracy theory that the US government knew about it...and used it as a reason to enter WWII and that the fact all the aircraft carriers were well away from Pearl Harbor at the time (for "no apparent" reason) is part of the foundation for the theory....

Yeah, I watched something on the History Channel about it. The Japanese broke radio silence, we got the transmissions, decoded them, but did nothing about it. The obvious reason for that would be that they wanted it to happen, so we could enter the war. Though, that's not known for sure.

you really dont get what a paradox is do you?

If you killed Hitler, you yourself MAY NOT EXSIST today...yes some races and families were brought together because of WWII, but one thing that accompanied BOTH great wars was: A BABY BOOM...people rushed things and eloped because there was a fear that it would all be over tomorrow. So in killing Hitler YOU YOURSELF may not be created afterwards.

To better explain this: You create a time machine, go back in time and kill your own grandfather...so no parent to spawn you, so no you, so no time machine was made, so your grandfather didnt die, you were born, made the time machine, killed your grandfather, no parent, no you, no time machine....It goes on....that is a paradox!

You guys gotta stop changing this topic up. I made this topic just for fun not to get all technical with physics and crap. I just want to know what you would do if this was posible and that if you were to create a suicide paradox in which you would not have been able to actually have gone back in time that it wouldnt not have let you. I'm basing this on the multiverse theory in which that if you did go back in time and changed something that it would create a new universe and have no effect on the world that you came from. I hope that this makes sence to you and that you will stop disscusing time travel physics and why or why is it not posible. My other topic is for that.

I'd find out the lottery results before-hand every week for a few years and buy out microsoft.

Also, I'd buy out EA and sort it out.

If I could go back in time

'67 Baby! Summer of Love
Then I'd stay until '69. Woodstock

I'd have to take my girlfriend with me though. She'd love it as much as I would Yeah, happy birthday in advance. I'll probly still be sick in two weeks. I always get this one level of sickness at the start of Winter, and it usually doesn't end until Winter ends. Frickan sucks.

If I had time machine I would

1. go back to year 0 and see if Jesus really existed
 2. go back in time and prevent EA from buying Westwood by any means possible
 3. Go to the time after world war 2 and make sure that USA controls the whole Europe(not just the west part), so that my former Country will have as good economy as for example France.

It's common knowledge that Jesus really did live during this time. It's, however, argued about who he really was. Is he the Son of Man or is he just some prophet teaching ethics to all those that would follow him?

No shit...

Lets not get off topic ok?

If I had a time machine i would do the folowing

1. Go into the future and stop what ever will eventually kill us all.
 2. Get rich through powerball or google investments.
 3. Go back in time with large amounts of tech and weapons and give them to the philippines and see what happens.
 4. Use my ability to travel freely through space and be on the moon when america lands there so i can freek them out.
 5. Sign my name on the declaration of independence.
 6. Warn westwood about everything (even about world desasters) and make sure they live to become realy really good.
 7. Have Fun

Time machine...tricky...

...I'd use it to travel back in time and assassinate myself before I built the machine, thereby creating a temporal paradox.

If you read the first post you would have found out that this would be imposible well, in this little time travel fantasy anyway. This is all on the assumption that by changing the past you create a new universe from which exists from that event of which you changed. Therefore you wouldn't have changed anything from the universe that you came from. Hence no time paradox. But thanks for posting!

Yes but I want a SOLID proof, like his birth certificate(just kidding), or something else.

I would go back in time and try to find ways to save the lives of my family and friends that I have lost. I would go forward in time to see what the future is like and come back and try to help everyone avoid anything bad that happens.
