Heheh, you'll find out when you grow up.

(Until that, enjoy your life as if every day was the last)

You know what's really sick, though? That was his first post. He came here and registered just so that he could ask us what we "thank" about love. In red text. With no punctuation. Or capitalization.

This world doesn't know what love is anymore. Now days, love is defined as getting a girlfriend, bangin' her, then leaving her like nothing ever happened. Just my opinion.

Love is bullshit....I'm getting divorced...so I'm very disillusioned with it at the moment....I just wanna do the whole thing over again, drinks, dates, more dates, dinner, then see where it goes...But I refuse to be really naive anymore and fall for a guy at the drop of a hat. They always turn out to be jerks and It always ends badly.

I'm pretty happy about this thread.

Love is not something you think or can properly explain, and even if it was, it probably wouldn't make sense to someone who thinks that love is "something that a girl uses to make stuck on them" (thats manipulation, not love). You will know what Love is when you experience it.

I always thought the girl was supposed to do the loving. So far in all my relationships, I seem to be giving enough love for both of us.

I think I'm getting gipped...

Note: You stole Ferhago's Avatar. Old Avatar at least.

Yeah, go lesbian, goooooooo!

We aren't all jerks. There might be one exception at that rule. Just find it. (3.000.000.000 other girls try that too...)

Seriously, it's sad to see how you feel toward guys. But don't be naive at all anymore as you say. Just protect yourself, don't f*ck on the first dates (yeah, wait for a month or more before you go further with the next guy) and if he can wait long enough and respect you, it will be the good one. Jerks never wait long to get what they want. As for relationship after wedding, there are no miracles. Each person in the couple must be intelligent enough to shut up when it's needed or to talk when there are problems. My longest relationship lasted 2years and a half and believe me, sometimes, girls can be bitch too... But it was just one girl... And I won't throw all of the girls in the same hole just because one was a bitch.

So just give some guy a chance and find the love again.

And about what love is:

Charles Baudelaire used to say:

"If you can give an explanation or a reason to your love, then it's not love, it's just interest."

I never said this is bad. I said that for her for the 'naive' part.

I meant naive as in to say: Falling for someone really quickly....Yeah my birthday is next thursday and I have a date....but we are just having drinks no more....If we enjoy it, we may have more, then dinner then who knows....but I wanna take things slowly as far as how I feel (or think I feel) about guys....as for men being jerks....It doesnt help when the woman is a Jerk Magnet, and I sure as hell can pick em!

Love is totally, totally, not worth the effort of trying to understand women.

To me, love isn't as powerful as trust. You can love someone without trusting them. You cannot trust them without love. Marriage only belongs to couples who mutually completely trust each other.
