WOL went down, but it wasn't the final switch-off. XWIS wasn't ready for Renegade gamers, but at that stage, it wasn't supposed to be.

I am reserving judgement until Olaf says its ready.

Until that point, I consider it as a BETA, liable to break/not run correctly.

I know this, but what I meant is that.. 2 days ago me and various other people tried to host on XWIS noone could join. Yesterday people could join servers, There is still servers that can't be joined but isn't that what they were making the NAT fix for?

The NAT fix doesn't appear to be completed, anything other than word from Olaf / Strike Team / people working on XWIS is just speculation.

I haven't seen anything officially saying that Ren has been redirected, if someone has then could they point the rest of us in the right direction. Until then I agree with light this is a trial or Beta of some sort.

I think EA just moved WOL to an even slower server...where is it now? Running in a P133Mhz?
It's painfully slow...

Try Jelly Server and FNFail serv, I'm almost sure you can join those too.

Lets just hope they create the redirection soon with the right fixes.

More servers working now, just try your favorite server, WOL is a ghostown now anyways.

As soon as the redirect is done I'm sure Olaf will post.

Until then, check the link to WIKI at the top of any forum board.
