Well it happend, Tookie was executed last night

<http://www.cnn.com/2005/LAW/12/13/williams.execution/index.html>

but was this good or bad? it brought not a single one of the victims back, and to most other countries who have abolished the death penalty, we seem to be more barbaric.

Whatever he did after his conviction is irrelevant- he passed the point of no return when he killed other human beings. He got the punishment prescribed to his crimes under US law, and that's the end of that. Being sorry for what you've done doesn't change the fact that you've done it and that it was wrong, nor does it excuse you from the punishment.

Why should we give a damn about how other countries think about the death penalty? That's as absurd as saying the rulings of high foreign courts should influence U.S. Supreme Court decisions.

Besides, all those other countries want a weaker United States.

I find it ironic that many of the people calling for Tookie's clemency were the same advocates for Terry Schiavo's death. Perhaps Terry's biggest mistake was that she didn't kill anyone before she went comatose.

The point of prison is punishment, not rehabilitaion. He got what he deserved. Maybe he will be a marter for the books he wrote. I am sorry he died but he did the things he did of free will and now he has payed for it. As for the death penalty, i think they need more evedance for a death sentance but what ever.

I find it pretty amusing that this is EXACTLY the stereotpe of American we have in mind here in Europe.

The thing that makes me doubt if this was the right decision is the time it took: 25 years!

Im tired of Europe thinking America is its bitch. We have our own damn free will, we don't need to ask you if its ok to do something. America has a large double standard that it must live up to and we are getting sick of it. If we do nothing we are heartless monsters, if we act we are the "evil empire". Maybe we should have let Germany roll over France and Russia and North Africa. Least then we would get 1 message instead of like 8.

It's more or less that every other country feels that because we can do what we want, we're somehow evil. Obviously we're supposed to not be able to use what we've earned. I don't see any other country putting forth the effort into helping out the world. Wow, Koyoto, big fucking whoop.

It just sounds to me like some people are whores, opening their legs to let the media stick their big cock of lies in.

They show pictures of this older man and we're all supposed to shit ourselves "omg don't kill this man!". But show us a picture of a redneck-looking fella whose picture looks angry and tell us he killed babies, and we're all more than happy to see him die.

Just founding the "Crips" gang is enough for me not to feel any sympathy. Good riddance to bad garbage.

Exactly. Just because Stalin didnt put a gun to the head of his victems, doesnt make him not responsible for thier deaths. Think of the hundreds (thousands even) that have been murdered for the last 20 years because of this gang. He may have not pulled the trigger, but hes part a reason that their dead. I have absolutely no sympathy for gang leaders. They ruin the lives of so many people, that even death by injection is still not justice enough.

I was actually referring to your last sentence, saying "all other countries want a weaker US". TBH: we don't care.

And the fact that you think we even care about what you do within your frontiers makes me laugh. You got death penalty? Nice for you. I'd like us to have it too for some bastards around here.

The one thing I do not agree on is the US wanting to put its big, long nose into the world policy when it could make profit of it but running off its responsibilities when it would cost something (yes, let's take Kyoto as exemple).

But we're going a tiny bit off topic here (a).

Moral of the story, US should nuke everyone now and get it over with. When US declines in power and China or EU is world leader then we can sit back and bitch.

I love when 2 year olds come in and think they know stuff. Hitler would have owned Russia if Western front hadn't been opened. Let me guess, your 1 of those "UN ROCKS!" people? When you learn that giving people a hug doesn't stop them from wanting to kill you, you will understand the world. Until then get back in your box.

You're a fucking moron. Hitler killed himself on April 30, 1945. He was in his underground bunker, so the Russians didn't exactly have a chance to assasinate him.

This is funny. "We" don't care? Who "we"?

You can't possibly speak for "all other countries" and the billions of people in them. And neither should he lay stereotypias like that. The fact is that people are very similiar in all the damn countries on this planet. They want same things when you look at the greater goals. You can't separate them by their thoughts and what they want, because it's not possible. Some people like death penalty in US, some don't. Same with 100% of the countries. Just like with all other things.

It's a very normal thing to compare 500 million people to another 500 million of people and spit out "patriotic" conclusions, it's just human. But it's stupid. People who want death penalty haven't magically grouped up in a single country, for example. People who support a war x haven't grouped up either. You get the point.

It's the main problem nowadays, really. People judge foreigners by the actions and statements of their governments and from the news they hear from them. It's not entirely a bad thing, though, but I'm not going into that.

Yeah, really off-topic, sorry about that.
