If that's true. You can try using a different Web browser, I think they don't use the same cookies. Else try and do it from a different computer.

Another PC would work, or another web browser.

If you have Firefox or Opera, use IE. If you don't have Firefox or Opera, now is your chance to get them.

Well, I can send you the password with the "Forgot your password?" thingy if I know what email you used to create that account. It will be reset though, there's no way you can get the current one back. But of course you can change it to something else yourself.

That doesn't matter... it wasn't one of the entries he mentioned, therefore my question was completely incomprehensible.

No decent forum software stores your password in plaintext. I can't see your password.

I can, however, update your sig.

If you use Firefox you can view your saved passwords...

I PM'd you the email address associated with your account. Im a bit confused though as to why you can post, yet not edit your sig?

If he's logged in, won't his cookie allow him to post?

(Although mine seems to expire every 2 weeks or so)

You needed to enter your password to make any changes to the account specs... sigs and whatnot. At least that's what the forums told me...

Can I get server owner access on this account please? Revoke the other account, it's not like I'll use it again.
