I might buy a console, not sure yet...It's either Nintendo Revolution or PS3, depends of the specs and price.

If they both suck I'll update the PC to super high-end, I suppose...

No games, no quality.

I waited years for PD:Zero, and its really just piss-poor. I didnt even finish it. Its crashed 3 times, and multiplayer is uninteresting. Like idebo said, stick to the N64.

lol, $520. Add the cost of two 280 opterons, a 1kw psu, water cooling for each gpu/cpu. Such a cost effective PC! And after all of that it would probably still bottleneck.

Ever wonder why you only see like a 50% performance gain using SLI(two GPUs), even with an overclocked FX60? Take a guess..

No, but that's what you'd need at the minimum to support all of that. Each GPU is putting out over 120W, more for the CPUs.

Single GPUs can still reach over 70C with top of the line air cooling, try putting four right next to each other and see how well it does Actually a single GTX can use up to 300 Watts on load... But considering that Quad SLi is basically a pair of cards glued together and linked to another pair (we aren't talking about Gigabyte's solution here). Besides, they aren't even available to us anyway, you'd have to buy a system from say ibuypower.com to get your hands on one.

I'll see... But I'm definitely not getting a dual dual core Opteron system now.

Its seems very naive to pick 1 consol out of 3 when 2 arnt even released yet!

Just because u own a ps1 and 2 why should u get ps3 just for the sake of the brand name...

X-box 360 from what i have seen isn't anything different from the ps2/x-box generation that we have already have except for better graphics.

Graphics are great an all but they dont make games good, only look good. The revolution is the only consol that seems to be trying to take gaming in a different direction with the interactivity of its new controller. What are Sony gonna come up with for ps3? will they actually make a new controller this time? why couldn't they be bothered with ps2?

EDIT

LOL wtf have sony come up with... the boomerang? what a pile of stinking crap. How easy can it be to create a nice lookin, comfortable controller. Jesus the master system and nes had better controllers then that.

Not sure if im allowed to post links but this isnt a supprise

I'm going to put in a pre order for a PS3 at my store (Toys R Us), and buy it the moment it comes out. Than, I'm going to wait for everyone to panic about there being a short supply of them, like the 360. Than, I'll sell it to one of you people for more than I payed, and use the profit to buy upgrades to my PC.

It looks like the best controller ive seen in a while! whats wrong with it? the lack of buttons is the only problem i can see. wtf have sony and microsoft ever come up with? the same shit over and over and they stink anyway. Just because this isnt your normal 2 handed controller ur wining, wait till it comes out and actualy try it.

And whats this about sony not havin bugs? i thought the ps2 had all sorts of crap go wrong with it when it came out. If it was on the carpet it fucked up, the cd tray would fuck up. All the consols fuck up when they first come out. whats the rush to preorder and pay such expensive prices for somthing that u could pick up second hand in a years time?

I'm not judging the controller by the amount of buttons, I'm judging it by how it would work and feel. It's the dumbest idea ever for a controller. Get off your stupid console anyways, the PC is pretty much better in every way except for things like price and portability. But since the Xbox 360 is like a load of cash, you can easily buy a good PC with the same amount of money you're spending. PCs are just as capable as consoles. Xbox is, for a fact, a PC.

OMG! i was just holding my N64 thinking the exact same thing. I have always argued this. Well except when i was a lil kid at school as i had a ps an i thought it was the bomb an i would argue for it all the way like a dumbass.

Guess what happend when my mate invited me round to his to play it. After 2 days worth of playing i had to have 1 and i knew the controller was the best controller out. The only prob with the N64 controller was the analog would get a bit stiff over time. Otherwise its the most comfortable controller ive ever used.

And if u can use it on revolution then thats brilliant! Im gettin a revolution, but not till like 3 - 4 years time when i can pick it up dirt cheap second hand. I havent even got a gamecube yet.

"I'm not judging the controller by the amount of buttons, I'm judging it by how it would work and feel. It's the dumbest idea ever for a controller"

I couldn't disagree with you more. Whats wrong with how it would work... you use the remote controll part by movement, have u not read about read about how the revolution controller works? As for how it would feel.... i cant see how the feel of that would be a problem at all, ur left had is free to move, your right hand is free to move, the left part had the analog placed nicly under ur thumb, the controller part looks quite comfortable when u look at side shots, its kinda beefy unlike an actual remote for your tele.

Compare this to the 360 that i tried about a month or so back in gamestation. The controller was nothing special, rather orkward actualy with how low down the analog and direction part was to get my thumb on to. I mean i cant say for definate that the revolution wont feel uncomfortable but its hard to say if u havent tried it.

Also i agree that PC's are better than any consol, you can play online, u can get patches and updates, u can get trainers, you can get skins and MODS! and a keyboard and mouse is the ONLY way u can play a FPS, any1 who says otherwise is a moron.

Via Xbox Live, you can get updates to games, download mods, skins, new areas, and you can play online.

No, anyone who says that you can play an FPS on anything other than the keyboard and mouse is perfectly correct. However, anyone who says that the keyboard and mouse aren't the best choices, is wrong. Atleast in my eyes, anyway.

You should keep busy with that Call Of Duty, because it looks like the only decent game coming out for a while...

Xbox controllers always felt awkward to me. The PS2's DuelShock is okay, but the N64's controler is fantastic! I hadn't played N64 for about six or seven years until two weeks ago, when a friend brough his. I sucked at all the games, but the controller felt really comfortable.

Consider that the N64 controller is the only one you can use to play one-handed, thanks to the central analog stick and tigger "Z" button in the back. I'm not sure WHY you'd want to play one-handed, but it's there if you need it.

Grim_Reaper_666 wrote on Sun, 26 March 2006 03:54I couldn't disagree with you more. Whats wrong with how it would work... you use the remote controll part by movement, have u not read about read about how the revolution controller works? As for how it would feel.... i cant see how the feel of that would be a problem at all, ur left had is free to move, your right hand is free to move, the left part had the analog placed nicly under ur thumb, the controller part looks quite comfortable when u look at side shots, its kinda beefy unlike an actual remote for your tele.

Even after you explained how it would work, it makes me feel even less willing to try it. I hate TV remotes, they piss me off, so this would piss me off just as much. Even if it didn't have millions of buttons. I'm sorry, but I find it ridiculously STUPID to be pointing a controller at the TV and just the way you would use it.

I will be buying none of the above, because I have a desktop that needs upgrading and that will pretty much eat and digest my whole entertainment/electronic gizmo budget for a good 6 months or so. Even if I had the money, I'd wait about a year until the price drops to a reasonable level, because I am not willing to blow $350+ on a single-purpose machine.

For me it's gotta be the Revolution.

The opportunity to play some truly innovative games appeals to me, despite the fact I can't see it working for all game types. Coupled with the fact that you'll be able to download and play game from the NES, SNES, Genesis/Megadrive, N64, Gamecube and more I can't resist.

HOLY CRAP, I CAN PLAY EXCITABIKE!?! ...I'm getting this thing... After I upgrade my PC. I may have put off the 360, but I'm in dire need of an upgrade.

No it doesn't. If I can play two of my favorite NES games on it without modding it, and it's a next-gen console, it doesn't suck. Now stfu.

Wow there are many fanboys around here....
How the hell can you base your opinion on something you didn't even try out..
And dont compare it to a tv remote because its alot smaller,lighter and ergonomic.

Revolution specs released. Price is estimated to be well below $200 as well.

FMhalo wrote on Sun, 26 March 2006 20:46Yeah, it would suck using the revolution controller for fps games.

what? being able to point directly where u want to shoot would suck? how is that any different from actually pointing a gun at ur screen, its even got a trigger button underneath like Z on the n64 controller.

so you would rather nintendo stick with the same old crap like microsoft and sony? using an analog stick to look around? The old controllers for fps is the worst ever. I picked up xbox 360 in a store and there was a world war2 style fps playing, i didnt even get a minute of gameplay out of it because i just couldnt control where i was pointing or how fast i was turning.

when ps1 and n64 came out for me it was the best thing since sliced bread. Gaming had changed forever. Right now i dont see anything changing except graphic updates. I overheard some guy talkin just last week saying all a consol is, is a graphics card. Only differences i see in consols now are things like xbox live and harddrives and dvd players... thing is i already have a pc...
