Hey, now that the XWIS ladder is working, do the pictures that you can put in your sig, etc., still work(the ones that show your rank, etc.)? If they do, could someone post a link to some?

They would probably have to be remade to match up with the XWIS server.

I just finished a server stats image for BF2. If I find the time I can probably make a player stats image for renegade.

There's always these:
<http://www.n00bstories.com/stats/gallery.htm>

Use the image code:
http://www.n00bstories.com/stats/renegade_stats.php?player=y_ourname&team=gdi

Where the "team=gdi" is one of the values from the Gallery.

Result:

Anyone else prefer the ladder being down? I thought people worked together more when points and stuff didn't get recorded anywhere. Still, I might as well have a sig too since I've never had one on a forum, ever. I'm Mr. Vanilla User.

I always thought I played better, or just had more fun, since I stopped worrying about how many ladder points I'd get each game. However I do like to be able to look back later and see all my stats.

No I don't agree, I think it's stimulating the gaming. When public ladder was down people kept playing for community ladders, so shouldnt really have made any difference.

One thing I learnt while the ladder was down is to not worry about how many times you die (since the deaths weren't being recorded anyway)... and I'm gonna keep playing like that. In game terms, it's a better thing for your team if you die while taking down more than your own worth in points, than staying alive just for the sake of it.

Gizbotvas had a headstart on all of us with this revolutionary idea

I just didn't have a signature here, and thought that it would be cool to have one..

It's not, the images might be hosted on n00bstories, but the stats are retrieved from the official Renegade ladder.

^ That is correct. These images were originally created by Dante, then the code enhanced by me and I've been hosting them for years.
